Cooking class to use wine

Alcohol may not be in UNL residence halls or in the Nebraska Union next semester, but it will be in the Food and Nutrition 280c classroom.

The gourmet cooking class will include cooking with and studying wines, said Hazel Fox, chairman of the Food and Nutrition Dept.

Fox said the department had to receive NU Board of Regents' approval to offer the course because of the campus alcohol ban.

Regent Ed Schwartzkopf of Lincoln said the board approved this case of campus alcohol use because, "we (NU) wouldn't progress very far if we restricted everything."

The course will contain "little actual kitchen work," said S.R. Haddal, course instructor and manager of Lincoln's University Club.

"Students expressed a desire for classes relating to commercial rather than institutional applications, such as hospitals," he said. "This course will give students a better employment opportunity to go out and find a job in a fine hotel or restaurant."
