Information booth to publicize UNL financial aid office

"Take us for granted" is the UNL Office of Student Financial Aid's theme in an attempt to increase student interest in financial aid applications.

Three types of financial aid are available—loans, grants and employment, according to financial aids office employe Doug SeEVERS.

An information booth in the Nebraska Union is planned for Dec. 9-11 to answer students' questions about financial aid.

About $3 million was spent last year for student employment, through either work study or other student employment, he said.

SeEVERS said that a student's parents must complete a Parents Confidential Statement (PCS), a needs analysis form, before that student qualifies for student employment.

PCS forms for 1976-77 are available in the financial aids office (Administration Bldg. 112) and must be completed and mailed to Berkeley, Calif. before Feb. 1.

Students applying for scholarships should apply at the financial aids office, said office employe Ron Fritz.

Loans and grants available to students include the National Direct Student Loan with three per cent interest, the Federally Insured Student Loan with seven per cent interest and the Basic Equal Opportunities Grant.
