

'Lights off' drive sliced fuel costs

Last year's attempt to conserve energy a "lights off" campaign, turning off building airhandlers at the end of each work day, removing unnecessary lights and setting thermostats at 67 degrees—resulted in electricity consumption cut by 26 per cent, fuel oil by 36 per cent and natural gas by 25 per cent compared with 1973, Wright said.

This year thermostats will be set at 65 degrees, he said, and unnecessary lights in Love Memorial Library North will be removed.

In most years, UNL fuel oil consumption begins Oct. 15, but Wright said because of mild fall weather natural gas has been available.

UNL uses No. 6 fuel oil, the last grade of fuel oil that will burn. No. 6 fuel oil is 20 to 25 cents a gallon less expensive in late summer because residue from road repair, its source, is plentiful. However, UNL cannot buy it then because every storage tank is full, Wright said.

If plans for a 800,000 gallon storage tank continue, Wright said, he could buy No. 6 fuel oil during late summer when it is less expensive and store about half the total amount of fuel oil needed each winter.

Wright said the storage tank project is No. 14 on Capital Construction's priority list and if the project is financed it will be in operation for the 1976 heating season.
