

Senator sees ASUN move as having political motives

CSL members Chip Lowe and Judith-Anne Sadler were mentioned as CSL members whose actions were questionable.

ASUN Senator and "new" CSL member Jim Wefso said he viewed ASUN's actions as political.

Wefso said he did not think arguing about the two groups' power would benefit students, so the senate decided "to have it out and decrease the power of one group."

Wefso said it would be simplest to change one CSL procedural rule which requires CSL recommendations to go directly to the chancellor for consideration.

He said a proposal which would have been introduced by ASUN Second Vice President Paul Morrison at the Nov. 10. CSL meeting would have required that the council's recommendations first go to ASUN and the Faculty Senate for approval before going to the chancellor. If they were not approved, recommendations would have to return to CSL for revision. If revised recommendations did not receive approval, they would not go to the chancellor.

Meeting refusal

CSL chairman Lyle Young refused to call the meeting to order, pending an opinion from Student Court.

Wefso said the senate had passed Resolution 36 to test the waters for Morrison's proposal. Resolution 36 stated CSL should be an on-call committee to meet at the request of the chancellor, ASUN and Faculty Senate.

The recision proposal allows for the return of all former student CSL members after CSL reorganization, but Sawyer said "I wouldn't be surprised if it would come down to all ASUN senators on the board."

Sawyer also said she thought the recision might have been too drastic a method to achieve desired input into CSL.

Sen. Julie Bergmeier, who voted against the recision proposal, agreed the ASUN action was drastic. However, she said she thought actions of some CSL student members were questionable, but that "the matter should be cleared up with more gradual, non-dynamic means."

CSL member Bob O'Neal, former ASUN

senator, said he thought reorganization is basically a good idea and said the whole structure of student input should be re-evaluated.

Legal advice

Lowe said he had sought legal advice and was going to petition a hearing before the Student Court.

All students questioned thought the decision of who CSL student members are would have to be decided by the court. But most agreed the decision probably would not be made until second semester.

"I don't want to make this a vindictive type thing," Lowe said, adding he would talk to some senators.

"What they're (ASUN) dealing with are not the important issues on campus," he said.

CSL member Carolyn Grice, a former ASUN senator, said she thought it was time to clarify the jurisdiction of the two groups and said she is "happy to see ASUN is taking some type of action instead of talking or complaining about it." However, she added she thought it was a big step and needed to be thought over.

She said she did not agree completely with Morrison's proposal.

Faculty involvement

"Why involve the faculty any more than they already are?" she said. "These (CSL) decisions concern students' out-of-the-classroom activities and should not involve faculty."

Sadler said she thought there were other means of achieving greater communication between CSL, ASUN and Faculty Senate and said she thought the recision will cause "so much friction that it's going to be self-defeating."

She also said she still was waiting to hear from Morrison and the ASUN Appointments Committee concerning a letter she received stating her possible recall.

Sadler added she did not know if she had been officially rescinded from CSL because she had not received a letter telling her so.

"I'm not anti-ASUN, per se, ...but it makes me mad when one of the important rights of democracy, the right to dissent, is thrown away."
