

Trial date set for student on probation charge

UNL student Ronnie "Ship" Smith was bound over Wednesday to Lancaster District Court on charges of probation violation.

Smith pleaded innocent at a Nov. 18 arraignment. At Wednesday's hearing a Jan. 9 trial date was set for Smith, with Judge Dale Fahmbruch presiding.

One of the stipulations of probation is that the person on probation not be involved in any illegal acts. The county, represented at the hearing by Deputy County Attorney Stephen Yungblut, contended that Smith violated this stipulation, thus causing grounds for revocation of probation.

According to Yungblut, Smith interfered with a Campus Police officer in commission of his duties in an Oct. 15 incident involving an alleged scuffle in the Nebraska Union between Campus Police Officer Ron Lundy and UNL student Regina Edington.

The only two witnesses at the preliminary hearing Wednesday were Lundy and Detective Al Broadstone. Both were prosecution witnesses.

Both men testified that on two occasions during the alleged scuffle between Edington and Lundy, Smith approached Lundy from behind and had physical contact with Lundy at least once. According to Lundy, Smith "slowed down the handcuffing of the prisoner."
