

CSL task force to present results of housing study

By Betsie Ammons

The Differentiated Housing Task Force has completed a two-month study of differentiated housing's success in UNL residence halls. In differentiated housing, students with similar academic and social interests live on the same floor.

Study results will be presented Thursday at the Council on Student Life (CSL) Housing Policy Committee (HPC) meeting, according to senior Don Thompson of Lincoln, HPC co-chairperson.

The task force reviewed and evaluated the original differentiated housing proposal which has been in effect since fall of 1974, said junior Karen Lundquist of Grand Island, task force co-chairperson.

More options wanted

Lundquist said the study's consensus is that UNL's living options should be expanded.

The task force will recommend to HPC that 24-hour visitation now given to graduate students at Selleck Quadrangle be granted other residence halls, Lundquist said.

In addition, she said, the report includes a recommendation that "coed living be expanded to its logical limit."

Lundquist said 52 per cent of students polled favor coeducational residence halls, and 41 per cent of that group favor men and women living on the same floor.

"If we can satisfy the small minority who request the no hour floors, why can't we satisfy the great majority who want coed floors?" she asked.

Minors wanting to live on co-educational floors or on those with 24-hour visitation would need parental consent, Lundquist said.

A proposal allowing alcohol consumption in residence halls is included in the task force report. Lundquist said alcohol use would be restricted to private rooms, and would be subject to other restrictions at the discretion of the NU administration.

The task force comprised "pretty good cross section of the university," according to Lundquist. The 15-member force included representatives from HPC, Panhellenic, Interfraternity Council, cooperatives, and the Residence Hall Association, as well as residence hall Student Assistants and members of the Housing Staff.

If HPC approves the study, it will be presented at CSL's Thursday meeting, Thompson said.

If approved, it will be submitted to Ken Bader, vice-chancellor for student affairs, and Richard Armstrong, director of housing. Armstrong and Bader will review the report and give it to the NU Board of Regents for further action, Thompson said.

Court finds UNL student guilty; orders pre-sentence investigation

UNL student Ronnie (Ship) Smith was found guilty of two probation violations Tuesday morning by District Court Judge Dale Fahrbruch.

He ruled that Smith's involvement in an Oct. 15 incident in the Nebraska Union constituted an unlawful act which violated his probation terms.

Sentencing was delayed pending a pre-sentence investigation by the Adult Probation Office. No deadline has been set for presentation of its findings.

Smith could face extended probation, fine, jail or a combination of these sentences, according to prosecuting attorney Stephen Yungblut. Smith is free on bail.

It is the second time Smith has been convicted of violating the probation he received for a February 1974 conviction of delivering a controlled substance. His first violation resulted from a July 1975 conviction of assault with intent to inflict great bodily injury.

The two charges for the Union incident were for a violation of the extended 1974 probation and violation of the probation set after the 1975 charge.

No charges were brought against Smith specifically regarding the Union incident in which he allegedly interfered with Campus Police Officer Ronald Lundy's arrest of UNL student Regina Edington during a scuffle in the Union.

Smith had testified he wanted to stop Lundy from physically contacting Edington during a scuffle. Edington was arrested and charged with two misdemeanor counts of assault. Her trial was scheduled for today.
