

Legislature hears support for College of Fine Arts

By Dick Piersol

Steven Sample, NU vice-president for academic affairs, testified Tuesday before the Nebraska Legislature's Education Committee in favor of a bill allowing the NU Board of Regents to establish a College of Fine Arts.

Sample said he did not know if the regents intended to establish the college, but they need the Legislature's authorization to do so if they think it is necessary.

Most major colleges and universities have such colleges, he said, and it is not clear why the authorization was omitted from statutes allowing the regents to establish other colleges within the university.

Sample said growing interest and enrollment in the UNL School of Music and the University of Nebraska at Omaha (UNO) School of Fine Arts, both designated as Areas of Excellence, may show a need for a College of Fine Arts at either campus.

He repeated that the bill, LB995, only would allow the regents to establish the college if they thought it was necessary at UNO or UNL.

Other colleges the Legislature has authorized, but the regents have never established, include Veterinary Medicine and Surgery, Rural Health, Public Affairs and Community Service and University College.

Students in the School of Music currently earn degrees in the Arts and Sciences, Teachers or Graduate Colleges. The College of Arts and Sciences also grants degrees in Speech and Theatre Arts, and bachelor of fine arts degrees for art majors.

There was no opposition to the bill during the hearing.
