ASUN defeats CSL recall move

By George Miller

The controversy between ASUN and the Council on Student Life (CSL) refused to die at the ASUN Senate meeting Wednesday night.

President Jim Say told the Senate the Student Court's recent decision invalidating ASUN's November action rescinding the appointments of six of its CSL appointees also spells out procedures necessary to recall appointees. He said ASUN's executive committee had decided not to appeal the court's decision.

Sen. Bob Simonsen, graduate student representative, then moved to formally recall CSL members Chip Lowe and Dennis Snyder who had taken the recall controversy to student court.

Sen. Fritz Stehlik, representing the College of Law, said Lowe and Snyder should be recalled because they voiced opposition to Senate Resolution 36, passed last semester, recommending changing CSL to a body which would meet only when called by the chancellor.

Simonsen then included another CSL member, Judith Anne Sadler, in the recall resolution because she also opposed the Senate's position.

Snyder was dropped from the recall resolution when it could not be established that he spoke in opposition to the CSL resolution.

The motion failed by a vote of 8 in favor, 15 opposed and two abstentions. Sen. Scott Cook of the College of Arts and Sciences then moved to have the Senate direct its CSL appointees to "follow and adhere to" Resolution 36 at its March 4 meeting.

Cook said any CSL appointee rejecting the Senate's orders could then be formally recalled.

Stehlik then warned that if CSL was made into an on-call body, future chancellors would not need to call it at all, thereby stopping any student input coming to him from CSL.

"This is not a very good way to restructure CSL," Stehlik said.

Cook then withdrew his resolution.

The Senate also voted to ask the NU Board of Regents to approve guidelines recommended by a special committee studying procedures by which members of the Nebraska Yell Squad are chosen.

The committee recommended that one member from the NU Band, Corn Cobs, Tassels and the Yell Squad select new members along with William D. Murphy, physical education and recreation professor and Yell Squad sponsor.
