

Subsidy to fuel buses

Although no state funds have been earmarked for the East Campus-City Campus shuttle bus service for next fall, Ray Coffey, UNL assistant manager of business and finance, said he hopes the buses will be financed partially by state funds.

Coffey said department budgets are being drawn up, and added it will be several weeks before he knows whether money for the service will be available. Revenue from student parking permits and a 10 cent passenger charge now pay for the service.

Even if the service receives state funds, students using buses will pay part of the cost, he said.

"The question is whether parking fees should support the program," said John Duvé, Campus Police parking and traffic coordinator. "Most of the students who buy parking permits don't use the buses."

The service originally was financed by parking fees, he said.

Duvé estimated the cost for bus service during 1975-76 academic year at $65,000, compared to about $107,000 in 1974-75.
