

Campus Police will fine for removing rhino boot

This fall, a $25 fine will be charged to unauthorized persons removing rhino boots from cars, said John Duve, parking and traffic coordinator for Campus Police. Rhino boots are metal wheel locks used by Campus Police to immobilize vehicles.

"The rhino boot is used for collection of fines," Duve said. He added it was an effective way to collect unpaid parking tickets and was less expensive than towing. To have a rhino boot removed, the owner must pay his parking fines plus $5 for removal of the boot.

Except for the fine for removing the boot, the parking regulations will remain the same for the 1976-77 school year, Duve said.

Sales begin Aug. 25

Campus Police will begin selling parking permits to students on Wednesday, Aug. 25, Duve said. Students living on the campus will receive a permit for the parking area closest to their residence hall, he said and commuting students will receive a permit which will allow them to park in any lot numbered 20 through 29. The permits will cost $25 again this year, he said.

Duve said university parking and traffic regulations also will be enforced on Saturdays of home-football games. Some exceptions are made concerning parking areas on those days, Duve said, but rules must be enforced for safety. He said illegally parked cars will be towed to a central garage. "The cars will have to be removed if they interfere with traffic," Duve said. He said cost to those who have their cars towed will be about $15.

To increase the number of parking spaces, parking meters have been installed on 10th from R to U streets, said Dick Mickelson, Lincoln's assistant city traffic engineer.

Turnover parking

Parking meters also were installed on R St. from 14th to 16th streets this summer. The meters were needed to provide turnover parking, Mickelson said. He said the two-hour-parking-limit signs which the meters replaced sometimes allowed students to park on R St. all day, he said.

"The meters should open up the space to university visitors and to customers of the businesses on R St., Mickelson said.

Students will be provided more parking spaces by the university, however. Kenneth Markle, campus police captain, said 100 student parking spaces have been added this summer at 19th and Vine streets. Also, several lots are being resurfaced with blacktop this summer, Markle said. The lots should be finished by the time school starts, he said.

"The resurfacing in some cases is something we have needed for a long time but have only recently had the money to do," Markle said.
