also said he wanted time to form a complete public statement about the incident.

If Shovers remains on the probation, he would not be able to continue as student body president and student regent. However, Beer said Wednesday that Shovers would be allowed to remain in ward M. Kennedy, Springfield police said Sunday. The woman and one man were released on their own recognizance, and the other man was held on $50,000 bail, police said.

Hijackers face charges

Paris—Five handcuffed hijackers were being flown to New York on a French military plane Sunday to face U.S. charges for the hijacking of a Trans World Airlines jetliner and the death of a New York policeman. Most of the 53 hostages freed from those posts until he has gone through the UNO student appeals process.

Beer said Shovers would appear sometime this week before an appeals board composed of three students, two faculty and one UNO staff member. If the probation is upheld, Shovers could appeal to UNO Chancellor Ronald Roskens. If Roskens upholds the probation, he could appeal to the NU Board of Regents.

the plane early Sunday also were en route home to the U.S. on two regular TWA flights. The band of Croatian nationalists, who hijacked the plane Friday night and ordered it on a hopscoth trans-Atlantic journey that ended in Paris, made demands that selected cities be pelted with propaganda.

More ordered

Baltimore—An additional pool of 400 persons will be ordered to report to the federal courthouse here Wednesday for possible questioning as prospective jurors in the political corruption trial of Gov. Marvin Mandel and four others.

Peace Corps pledge

Washington—Sen. Walter Mondale said in an interview that he and Jimmy Carter would undertake to restore the Peace Corps to something resembling what it was under the Kennedy administration. Meanwhile, in Plains, Ga., Jimmy Carter is campaigning with a set of statistics designed to show the Democrats do the best job of managing the economy.

Others associated with the university, who wished to remain unidentified, said they thought a new chancellor's arrival might have hastened the departure of others. They said they thought a chancellor preferred to have his own team.

Young said he hoped his arrival was not a factor in others leaving.

"I felt I had a good working relationship with those who have decided to leave since I arrived," Young said. "I expressed my strong desire for them to stay here. I think very highly of Bader, Wright and (assistant to the chancellor Larry) Braskamp."

He called it a "logical step" for Wright and said he thought Bader "was dedicated to his work with the university" citing Bader's refusal of the first offer extended him.

"It's a case of having capable people in these positions," he said. "They had very good professional reasons for making the changes."

"They're all going to be difficult to replace. But it would be unhealthy if we didn't have good enough people here that other institutions did not want them."
