

Holtzclaw gets nod for grad post

UNL's Chemistry Dept. lost a professor last week, but it was the administration's gain. Henry Holtzclaw Jr., foundation professor of chemistry, was approved as UNL dean of Graduate Studies by the NU Board of Regents Sept. 8. However, Holtzclaw said he will remain a quarter-time chemistry professor, as well as director of Graduate Studies.

Calling the graduate program the "academic conscious of a university," Holtzclaw said it was important to maintain high academic standards, in order to make the program as strong as possible.

He said UNL has a "very strong" graduate program. "We stand well, within the Big Eight," he said.

Too early to comment

Holtzclaw said it was "too early to make comment" on specific changes he might have in mind to improve the graduate college.

Last fall, 3,500 graduate students were enrolled at UNL. This is a ten per cent increase over the previous year. He said a slightly larger number is expected when this fall's enrollment figures become available.

The growing enrollment number indicates "students feel they need more education," Holtzclaw said. Despite a tighter job market, "we have had good success at Nebraska at placing graduate students," he added.

Holtzclaw said he doesn't "look at this job as a stepping stone" to a more lucrative one, even though many UNL administration officials have left for that reason.

Faces meeting

Holtzclaw has moved to his new office in the Administration Bldg., where he is spending the first few days "getting oriented," he said. In the next few days, he is faced with meetings—the Graduate Research Council, the Graduate Council and the Executive Graduate Council.

Holtzclaw joined UNL in 1947 as an instructor of chemistry and moved to professor in 1958. In 1967, he was named foundation professor of chemistry.

He is the co-author of two freshmen chemistry textbooks which are now being used in more than 400 colleges and universities.
