Spanish-oriented programming now KRNU fare

By Mary Jo Pitzl

South-of-the-border music and news is not exactly the greeting you would expect when you tune in a Lincoln radio station.

But on KRNU, 90.3 FH, Spanish-speak announcers and programs have been a part of standard operations for more than a year.

Fiesta Latina is a half-hour Spanish radio show broadcast at 5:30 p.m. every Sunday on KRNU, the laboratory braodcast station of the UNL School of Journalism. Music from Spanish-speaking countries is featured on the show, according to Norma Cantu, one of two announcers for

"We try to play music from all Latin America, not just Chicano, not just Spanish," said Cantu, a teaching assistant in the English Dept. She explained that the program's title was chosen to appeal to all people speaking Latinoriented languages. Fiesta Latina includes some public service and community announcements for Spanish-speaking listeners in its musical format, Cantu said.

Fiesta Latina helps KRNU fulfull its obligation to meet community needs by 'letting people know what the Spanish-speaking people in Lincoln are doing," assistant journalism professor Stephen Coon, coordinator for Fiesta Latina, said. Coon, also KRNU public affairs director, said he would like to put more information into the program, to reach a better balance between music and news.

There is little coverage of Latin American news in Lincoln, Cantu said. Latin American Review, a half-hour public affairs program broadcast from the University of Texas-Austin, follows Fiesta Latina weekly at 6 p.m. The Review gives news of Latin America.

Expansion to an hour-long format would allow more time for news broadcasts and interviews with Spanishspeaking leaders in Lincoln, Cantu Said.

"We have resource people with services to offer Spanish-speaking people in the community," she said. Fiesta Latina would be a way to make these resources available."

"Hopefully we can expand the information part of it (Fiesta Latina)," Coon said. Extending the program to an hour will depend on audience response to what currently is being broadcast.

The Fiesta Latina staff comprises Cantu, Coon and Beatriz Gonzalez. With Coon's technical assistance, the two women tape their weekly show in the KRNU studios.

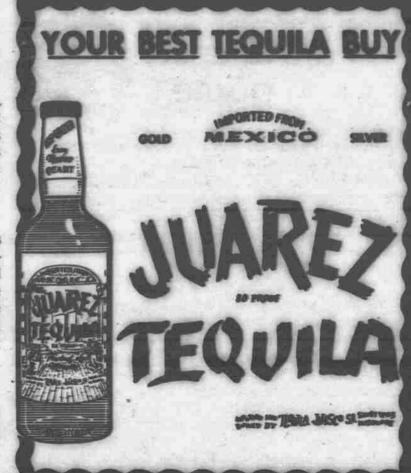

Because Fiesta Latina is considered a public service to the community, there is no production charge, Coon said.

Fiesta Latina originated last year with two Mexican graduate students, who transferred the program to Cantu and Gonzalez when they left UNL last spring.

"We're not professionals," Cantu said. "Fiesta Latina is something all students should listen to, even if it's just to get the feeling of the words and the music."

Audience size and response to Fiesta Latina have been difficult for the staff to gauge. A sizeable percentage of the Mexican-American community in Lincoln is aware of the program, according to Coon. People taking spanish classes like to listen to Fiesta Latina to brush up on their listening ability, he added.

Fiesta Latina is the only foreign language program of its kind broadcast in Lincoln, Coon said. Similar programs in other languages at KRNU are not being planned,
