

TKE running for Guinness record

Twenty members of Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) fraternity will be trying to run their way into the Guinness Book of World Records this weekend.

The "TKE World Record Run for Cystic Fibrosis" will have members running 215 miles from the TKE house at UNL to the TKE house at the University of Kansas (KU) campus in Lawrence in an effort to collect money for research of cystic fibrosis, a children's disease.

If successful, the 215-mile run will be the longest relay run on record, the previous record being a 100-mile run set by a New Jersey athletic club, according to Tom Straub, a sophomore engineering major from Cozad.

The TKE members will try to have their record included in the Guinness book after the run, Straub said. The runners left Lincoln at 7 a.m. today and plan to be in Lawrence in time for the KU-Cornhusker football game Saturday.

At pre-game ceremonies, they will present a football signed by President Gerald Ford and Democratic challenger Jimmy Carter to officials of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

Gov. J. J. Exon also signed the football.

TKE members have spent several weeks soliciting donations in Lincoln and in their home towns, Straub said.

More than $200 has been collected, he added.

The TKE members are running for the second time. Last year they ran the ball from Omaha to Manhattan, Kan., in time for the Nebraska-Kansas State game.

Restriping of lot could add spaces

Campus Police hope a Sunday restriping of the Area 3 parking lot behind Harper Residence Hall will add several parking spots.

Capt. Kenneth Markle, traffic and parking officer for Campus Police, said the lines will show students where the stalls are.

"It's so we don't get eight or nine cars over the lines and lose parking spaces," Markle said.

The Harper restriping is not in response to any current parking complaints, Markle said.

"This (restriping) has been in the making, but it takes so long to get through the channels of authority that this has taken about a year," he said. "As money gets available, we do what we can."

John Duve, Campus Police parking coordinator, is out of town exploring how other schools solve their parking problems, Markle said.

Markle said parking problems at UNL have been worse this year, because Campus Police did not know that residence halls would be filled beyond capacity.

"We had no information about the increase in the numbers of students in dorms with cars or of the increase in commuters, because 25 to 30 per cent of them (students with cars) don't fill out the cards they get in the mail before school starts," he said.

Students with parking problems should go to the Campus Police, Markle said, especially students having problems finding places to park for night classes.

Administrators...

"There is no way to run an institution without an administrative arm. You need both arms and get quality people in both," he said.

"It's a question of whether or not administrative services are overbuilt," Gierhan added.

Sample agreed, saying that "you just have to look at the particular job (being done)."

"There is no evidence that people leave (the university) for more money," Hedges said.

Tommerasen said administrators usually leave to take a different job and do not make lateral transfers to the same job at another school.

More responsibility and a new challenge seem to count for more than just a salary increase when administrators are attracted to other schools, Tommerasen said.

The administrators said factors that might make them stay in Nebraska are the quality of life in Nebraska, a good working environment for faculty and staff at UNL, "level-headed students" and the good quality of the Lincoln school system for administrator's children.

Gierhan and Tommerasen said some faculty members may resent the salaries of persons who work in the NU Systems Office because those persons are physically removed from the campuses.

He said he thinks this resentment carries over to salary concerns by some faculty members.

Tommerasen said administrators in the Systems Office are not in close contact with students and faculty.
