

Task force seeking input on Union programming

Questionnaires about programming for the new Nebraska East Union will be distributed on East Campus, said Craig Hertel, a member of the task force responsible for program suggestions for the new Union.

"We're super interested in what students want, so we're going to try to do anything that's feasible," Hertel said.

The 2,500 surveys will be distributed to faculty members and students. Questions on the three-page form were drawn from responses in East Campus suggestion boxes.

"When we put out the boxes, we were getting a lot of structural recommendations, but that's something we can't do anything about," Hertel said.

The task force is not responsible for space allocation in the new Union. He mentioned dances, rock concerts and foreign films as programs that are under consideration.

One facility that will be in the Union is the Burr-Fedde food service. It will begin operation the week after Thanksgiving vacation, Hertel said. The new Union also will offer East Campus students a location for speakers and meetings, a student services office and possibly a nurse, according to Hertel.

A student organizational suite in which "clubs can get together and coordinate" will also be in the Union, he said. He said he hopes communication will be increased as a result of this new proximity of organizations.

Hertel said he also hopes that by involving students in the programming decisions for the new Union, they will feel more a part of it and will use it more often.

East Campus is "more like a community because it's not so big," he said.

"They'll support us if we get their interest at first," Hertel said.

Dec. 8 is the deadline for returning the questionnaires that will be distributed in classrooms. Hertel said this distribution plan was decided upon by the task force "because we didn't want to exclude any groups from responding."

After the surveys have been collected, they will be analyzed by a computer, he said. Computer results should be available in January, and a report will be made to the Program Council in February, he added. Decisions made from the survey probably will not go into operation until next year.

Were you born to fly?

Train for the Navy's sky now.

If you qualify, you can sign up for Navy Flight Training while you're still in college and be assured of the program you want. Our AOC program (if you want to be a pilot) or our NFOC program (if you want to be a flight officer) can get you into the Navy sky for an exciting, challenging career.

As a freshman or sophomore, you can reserve a place in Naval aviation before you graduate by participating in the Aviation Reserve Officer Candidate (AVROC) program.

If you're interested in hearing more about a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity in Naval aviation, see us on campus at the Student Union November 29 through December 2.
