

Faculty Senate tables administrative-post measure

By Sharon Armstrong

The UNL Faculty Senate voted Tuesday to table the resolution that recommended UNL faculty members be put in administrative positions.

The resolution, presented by Bill Campbell, associate professor of physics, was tabled by a two-vote majority of the senate.

Some senators expressed concern over the wording of the resolution. It states that certain high-level administrative positions be designated as positions to be filled by faculty members on a fixed-term, non-renewable basis.

Campbell said the wording of the resolution, which he prepared, was vague because he said he thought the positions should be negotiated at a later date. The resolution recommended that the Executive Committee of the Faculty Senate meet with UNL Chancellor Roy Young to establish the procedures for implementing the resolution.

The purpose for the fixed, non-renewable terms for the positions was to take the pressure off the professors who might take the positions, Campbell said. He said more professors could afford to take the time and would know they wouldn't be pressured to continue the job.

It will take a majority senate vote to bring the resolution off the table, according to Faculty Senate President Henry Baumgarten.

The Faculty Senate passed a motion, tabled at the November meeting, that reaffirmed the duties of the Academic Freedom and Tenure Committee until the duties of the committee can be redefined.

In other action, Paul Byerly, chairman of the Scholarship and Financial Aids Committee, reported that a Four Year Regents Scholar must maintain full-time enrollment and a 3.5 accumulative grade point average.

Byerly said that in the past the required average was 2.75. He said this was set in "ancient times" when the university average was much lower.

"Because of grade inflation, our outstanding Four Year Regent Scholarship winners can keep their scholarships while maintaining an average lower than most students at the university," Byerly said. He said the current university average is about 3.1.

Baumgarten expressed concern that grade averages vary from college to college and it may not be fair to set a requirement of 3.5 in some colleges. Engineering was given as one example of this.

In other action, Virginia Corgan, president of the UNL Faculty Club, addressed the senate concerning the financial problems of the club.

Corgan said club membership has gone from nearly 400 members in the late 1960s to about 220 now. She said the club needs about $10,000 in membership dues each year.

The Faculty Club currently is running an $8,000 deficit, according to Corgan. She said the board of directors at the Faculty Club have set a March 15 deadline to decide the fate of the club.

"If it continues like it is, we will close by the end of the 1977 academic year," Corgan said.

Lincoln bus riders find some shelter

Lincoln bus riders will have shelter from the storm thanks to the Lincoln Transportation System (LTS).

LTS has built a temporary wooden shelter on the north side of Q st., between 12th and 13th streets, and is building another at 11th and J streets.

The wooden shelters are only temporary, according to Jim Donaghy, LTS manager. He said LTS has applied for federal funds that would provide eight plexiglass and aluminum shelters, 13 buses, 360 bus stop signs and another building to store equipment.

The plexiglass shelters will cost $4,600 each, and, if federal funding is approved, Donaghy said the shelters would be built next fall.

Donaghy also said plexiglass shelters should be used because they are transparent.

Since the shelters usually are placed in front of businesses "it wouldn't be fair to cover their buildings," Donaghy said.
