

Food symposium begins today

Seeds of Change, a two-day symposium on food policy, begins at noon today in the Nebraska Union Main Lounge.

The free program is sponsored by International Educational Services, the Nebraska University Public Interest Research Group (NUPIRG) and Open Harvest Food Co-op. It will be at the Nebraska Union from noon to 6 p.m. today and at the Nebraska East Union from 2 to 6 p.m. Thursday. Room numbers will be posted.

The purpose of the symposium is to create awareness of food problems and relate them to problems in Nebraska, according to NUPIRG member Don Macke. He added that the idea for the symposium came from the original Food Day in the early 1970s.

Wednesday's program begins with films from noon to 2 p.m. about the world hunger and food problems. Agricultural consultant Roger Blobaum will present a slide show and discussion from 2 to 4 p.m. concerning his case study on the food crisis in China.

The films Tilt, which deals with the maldistribution of world resources and Ruth Stout's Garden, which is about organic farming, will be screened from 4 to 6 p.m.

Thursday, Mary Sheets, co-manager of Open Harvest Food Co-op, will lead a panel discussion from 2 to 4 p.m. on regional marketing and direct buying.

The final program of the symposium will be a film Rich Man, Poor Man: Food, and a panel discussion. The BBC film deals with the problem of feeding the world's people, sponsors said.

Representatives from Ceylon, England and Ghana will discuss how the food crisis differs with the various agriculture development levels of each country, according to sponsors.
