No arrests made in library attack

No arrests have been made yet in connection with a Thursday attack of a 23-year-old UNL student in Love Library.

Gerald Rudolph, dean of libraries, said it was the first attack in the library since he started at UNL two years ago. The library does not plan to increase security for finals week when many students use the library, he said.

No campus policemen are permanently assigned to any university buildings, including the library, and Love Library is responsible for its own security, said Campus Police Capt. Robert Edmunds.

The student attacked Thursday was studying in the seventh floor book stacks, Edmunds said. She was hit on the back of the head with an unknown object at 8:50 a.m., he said.

The woman was treated for cuts and released from Lincoln General Hospital, he said.

A witness saw a man run by at the time and campus police have a possible description of him, Edmunds said.

"He was in his early 20's, around six feet tall, slender to medium build, with brown hair, wearing jeans and a blue waist length nylon coat and was wearing two-tone plastic rim glasses," Edmunds said.

Rudolph said Love employs two people for security, but usually these people patrol exits and occasionally check the building.

Rudolph said he has alerted his staff to the situation and if people are scared to use the stacks, he suggested they should study in couples.

Balloon Bonanza

Pick it,
Pop it,
Pay it.

Everybody is a winner during Jason's balloon bananza. You can save from 10% to 100% (free) on everything in Jason's downtown store.

All you have to do, after you've picked out the clothing you want to buy is pull a balloon down from the ceiling and pop it. Inside the balloon will be a card telling you what percentage discount you get on your purchase.

Everybody wins!

Jason's balloon bananza starts tomorrow, continues through Saturday. (April 28th - 30th).
