Coalition has gathered 63,000 names

Citizens for Lower Taxes, a coalition trying to repeal legislation increasing state school aid, Monday announced it had gathered more than 63,000 petition signatures. That is about 30 per cent more than the legal requirement.

Columbus Sen. Donald Dworak said that if the 45,130 signatures needed by law are upheld, he expects the State

Gov. J.J. Exon, when he announced support for the drive earlier this summer, promised he would ask the board of equalization, of which he is chairman, to roll back the sales tax if the drive succeeded. The drive also was legally required to have signatures from at least 38 counties.

The law in question is LB33, passed over Exon's veto by the 1977 Legislature. It would raise state school aid $20 million this fiscal year and another $20 million in each of the next two fiscal years.

Meany for treaty

Washington—AFL-CIO President George Meany endorsed the new Panama Canal treaty Monday, giving President Carter a powerful ally in his drive for ratification of the treaty.

Meany told a press conference that American involvement in the canal, built "in the days of gunboat diplomacy," is nothing to be proud of, and there is no reason "why we should lay claim to territory . . . 6,000 miles away."

Epileptics

Washington—The nation's two million epileptics suffer from job discrimination, inadequate medical and social services and prejudice that can be countered only with a federally backed national effort, a major 18-month study concluded. The report released Monday was commissioned by Congress to bring together for the first time all ramifications of epilepsy. It contains more than 400 recommendations for government and private agencies in a plan for national action.

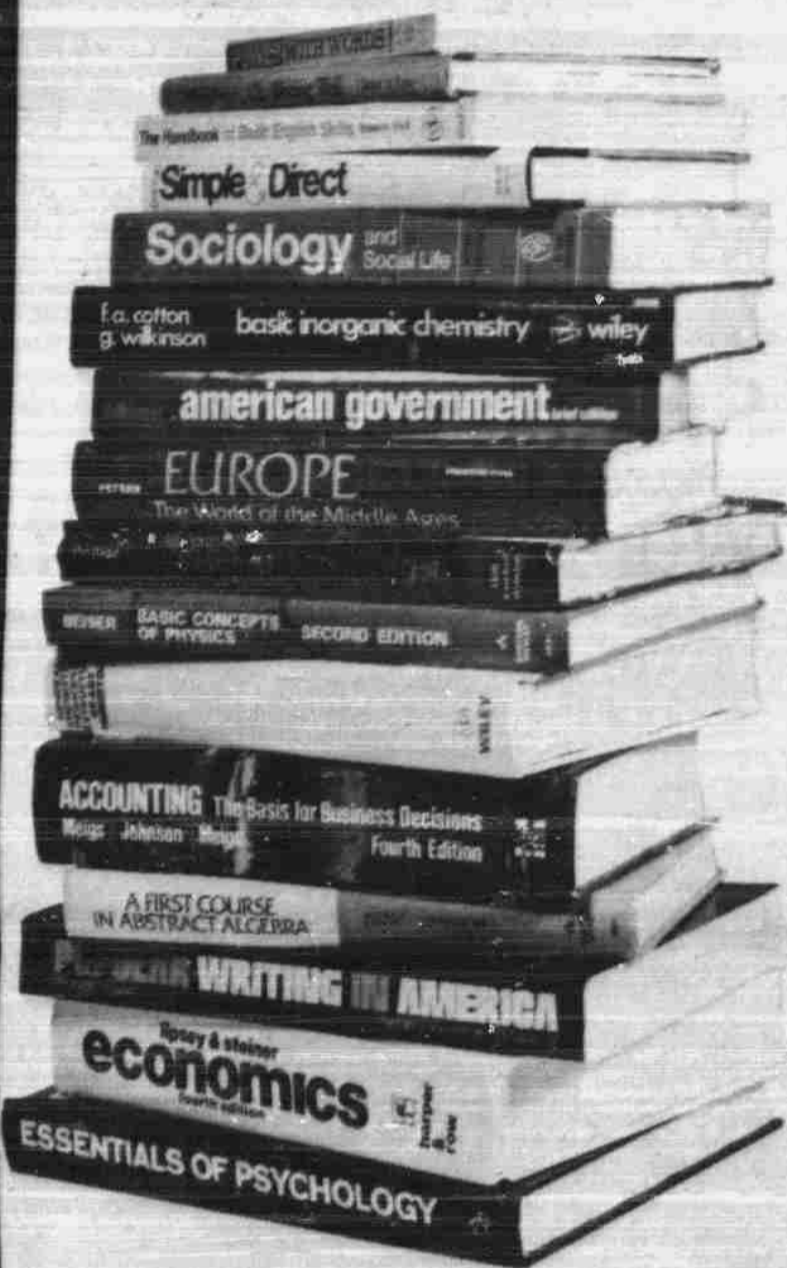

Abortion payments

The State Department of Public Welfare Monday outlined a regulation restricting Medicaid payments for abortions. It tentatively plans to make it effective Thursday.

"I'm shooting now for Sept. 1, effectively," Welfare Director Eldin Ehrlich said. He had announced the general aspects of the restriction earlier, but language details were not final then.

The new regulation restricts Medicaid payments for abortions to those cases in which a prospective mother's life is endangered or when a pregnancy stems from rape or incest.
