

Atrium...

The Atrium is housed in a sixty-year-old structure at the corner of 13th and N Streets, formerly the home of Sears and Roebuck and the National Bank of Commerce. The building, built in 1917, was originally occupied by the Rudge and Guenzel Dept. Store.

Eventually, a skywalk system connecting stores along O St. will be built through the second level of The Atrium. The skywalk will run from Brandeis to The Centrum, a second retail development, to the Atrium and end at Magee's.

About 75 per cent of this space has been leased so far, but there is room for about 30 shops, he said. The shops will include: Ben Simon's; five women's clothing stores, Joffe's, Peck and Peck, The Limited, The Daisy, and The Wardrobe; Cristell's, a custom jewelry store; Anthony's, a contemporary shoe stop; The Great Gyro, a specialty sandwich shop; a hairstylist and another jeweler.

Office space

Office spaces have been leased by the accounting firm of Miller and Moore; Lincoln Electric System, and the law firm of Nelson, Harding, Yeutter, Leonard and Tate.

Of the stores which opened Monday, Ben Simon's is the largest with 17,000 square feet.

The same men's and women's departments that were spread through the old six-floor store on O St. is consolidated on two levels at The Atrium.

The store has no formal showroom windows, but features a club-type atmosphere, complete with living room furniture and fireplace.

Wooden staircase

A heavy wooden staircase leads to a 1,000 square foot mezzanine level and the second level.

The Daisy, with 2,800 square feet of space sits on The Atrium's second level. It features junior and contemporary fashions for women.

Joffe's is a street-level shop specializing in women's career clothing. It features a wooden spiral staircase to the store's second level.

The grand opening of the Atrium is scheduled for November at which time most of the stores will be open, he said.
