Haymarket still only built on idea

Even after 12 years of waiting, the UNL College of Architecture still is interested in restoring Lincoln's old Haymarket Square area, according to Jim Griffin.

Griffin, a faculty member of the College of Architecture, said recent talk to restore the Haymarket area is not a new idea. UNL has worked on various plans for the past 12 years, but most of the plans have been lost or misplaced because of lack of storage, he said.

Griffin said the proposed study would benefit UNL and the Lincoln by beautifying the area and opening more stores and apartment space. The study also would give UNL architecture instructors and students the chance to practice their trades.

Attention is being drawn to the proposed study by the Marketplace Restoration Association, an organization formed to promote rejuvenation of the Haymarket area. The study would concentrate on an area bounded by R St. on the north, 9th St. on the east, L St. on the south and the railroad tracks and railyard on the west.

"The Niobrara: A River in Jeopardy" is the title of a slide show which will be given on Tuesday, September 13, at 10 a.m. in the Great Plains Room of the University of Nebraska's East Union on the East Campus. Following the slide show, a panel will discuss three aspects of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation's proposed Norden Cam: fish and wildlife, economics, and geology. Comments and questions will be encouraged at the end of the presentations.

This two-hour meeting is a coordinated effort involving Save the Niobrara Association and other environmental organizations. Upon the request of these groups, the University of Nebraska's Water Resources Center is providing a forum for the program.

All welcome.
