

Carter says energy crisis imminent

Washington—Warning that energy crisis is imminent, President Carter urged the Senate Thursday to reassemble his energy program and approve it. "They have their own reputation at stake," he said.

Carter told a nationally televised news conference that the energy bill is the major product he and the nation expect from Congress this year.

"The reason that we have to act is not because we have crises or emergencies at the present time, but because they are imminent," the President said.

Carter said "there are tremendous pressures on the Senate now from lobbyists," and urged the lawmakers to withstand them. He put special emphasis on three features of his program that are in jeopardy in the Senate, a new tax on domestically produced oil, his "gas guzzler tax" on the big automobiles that burn the most gasoline, and conservation and measures to shift industrial users of gas and oil to coal and other energy sources.

Fahmy optimistic

New York—Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy said Thursday he was optimistic that the Geneva Mideast peace conference could reconvene before the end of the year.

Fahmy made the comment after meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, and returned to New York from Washington to continue meetings with Arab and other foreign ministers attending the General Assembly.

The Carter administration, in a move clearly designed to sway Israel, is openly discussing with Arab leaders a direct role for the Palestine Liberation Organization in future Mideast peace talks.

Fahmy declined to say whether the PLO was discussed, referring reporters to his General Assembly address in which he insisted that the PLO attend Geneva talks on an equal basis with other participants.

Bergland headlines

Des Moines—U.S. Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland will headline the second Midwestern Conference on Food and Social Policy with what is billed as a "major address" by conference officials.

Bergland will discuss the nation's agriculture policy on the second evening of the three-day conference, which begins Nov. 8 in the Marina Inn at South Sioux City, Neb. The secretary will speak after a 7:30 p.m. dinner, then field questions from a panel of agriculture experts for about 30 minutes.

The panel, moderated by Neb. Gov. James Exon, will consist of Dr. James W. Whitaker, an Iowa State University history professor, Don Muhm, farm editor of The Des Moines Register; Don Ringler, farm editor for the Omaha World-Herald; and Rudolph H. Schnasse, managing editor of Agriculture World at St. Paul, Minn.
