

Week of comedy designed to 'tickle your fancy'

In an effort to brighten a week filled with grim mid-term test taking, the Union Program Council (UPC) will present a week of laughter Sunday through Oct. 13. Attempting to "Tickle Your Fancy" (the program's name), UPC will explore all aspects of comedy from stand-up comedians, mime and music artists to lectures, discussions and workshops.

Dale Droge, UPC secretary, said the work and planning for "Tickle Your Fancy" began last Spring. All of the 14 UPC committees are involved with this fall's program.

Droge explained that the idea for "an area of major concentration in one subject" isn't new at the Nebraska Student Union. Last year, UPC's Talks and Topics Committee sponsored a week-long program, Power and Conspiracy in America. Although last year's program was successful, Droge said, UPC decided the next program should be "a lighter subject with broader appeal." Droge said even though the comedy is limited to American humor it's "still so vast there should be something to appeal to everyone."

The following is a schedule of "Tickle Your Fancy" events. All programs are presented with no admission charge unless otherwise noted.

Sunday, Oct. 9,
7:30 p.m.—"Comedy Then and Now" with Kelly Monteith and special guest star Henny Youngman. Centennial Room, Admission $1.50 for students, $2.50 general admission. Droge expects the first show of "Tickle Your Fancy" week to draw about 2,500 people making it the largest crowd of any scheduled event.

Monday, Oct. 10
Editorial cartoon by Ranan Lurie, nationally syndicated cartoonist will be displayed in the Union Main Lounge through Oct. 15. These cartoons will be available for purchase, and can be autographed by Lurie during his campus visit. Lurie, voted one of the top three editorial cartoonists by the National Cartoon Society, has over 32 million readers in 200 newspapers around the world, including the Lincoln Journal.

11:30 a.m.—Brown Bag Lecture, "Iamb: The Way, The Truth and Life," poems and discussion by William Kloefkorn, Nebraska Wesleyan University.
