

House vote would further expand increased taxes

Washington—The House voted to remove all limits on wages earned by recipients of Social Security pensions, a move that would expand still further the drastic tax increases planned for more than 100 million Americans. The amendment by Rep. William M. Ketchum, R-Calif., would phase out the current limit of $3,000 in outside earnings by 1982.

The measure was approved 269 to 149 as the House moved toward passage of a bill to keep Social Security from going broke by drastically increasing the taxes paid by American workers.

Racial insults

Evanston, Ill.—A black professor at Northwestern University says that comedian Paul Lynde directed a series of "racial insults" at him shortly after Lynde appeared at the school's homecoming ceremonies.

Sociology Prof. James Pitts said that the incident occurred at a fast-food restaurant near the campus and was witnessed by about 10 people.

Pitts, a former Northwestern basketball player, said Lynde referred to "spoiled black people," and made an obscene gesture at him.

and deploring Lynde's alleged behavior.

Federal probes

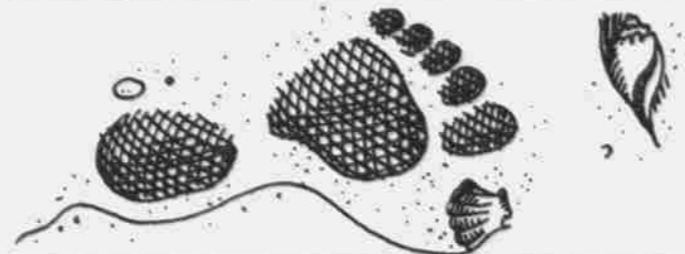

Federal probes into allegations that Army recruiters in Nebraska violated the federal privacy law and some military regulations are nearly complete.

The FBI has sent to the Justice Department in Washington a report on the investigation into the privacy act violation charge. The Army's Criminal Investigation Division said through a spokesman in Washington its probe is nearly completed.

Both probes focus on sales of an insurance-investment program, allegedly through recruiters and commissioned officers.
