

Student arraigned in break-in

A Nov. 8 arraignment has been set for a UNL student who allegedly broke two windows at Selleck Quadrangle early Thursday morning while breaking into the undergraduate women's wing.

The student was cited on charges of malicious destruction of property and disturbing the peace and released, according to Campus Police Sgt. Joe Wehner.

The student, a 19-year-old male, shattered a window at the southwest entrance to the 4000 building and another window at the northeast entrance to the 5000 building, Wehner said. The 4000 building houses graduate students. The broken window at the northeast entrance is part of the undergraduate women's housing.

Wehner said the student entered the 5000 building about 1:30 a.m. He was found inside a third floor residence room at 2:10 a.m. following a room-to-room search, Wehner said.

"From the investigation of the officer, he broke in because he was mad that he was locked out," Wehner said. Residence hall entrances are locked at 1 a.m. and students cannot enter without showing their room key to the security officer. Wehner said the student knew the occupant of the room, and was cooperative with Campus Police when they took him away. The student admitted that he had been drinking earlier that night, Wehner reported.

Alumni ocean cruise planned

How does spending 14 days aboard a luxury liner, leisurely cruising two oceans, and stopping at seven glamorous ports sound to you? It's a dream, right?

Well, not for some NU Alumni.

Jack Miller of the alumni association said that, so far, about 35 Nebraska alumni have signed up for the Big Eight sponsored Alumni Cruise.

This is a cruise that has been offered every winter for about five years, Miller said.

The large luxurious cruise ship, Fairsea, will set sail from San Juan, Puerto Rico on January 21, 1978. It will stop at Grenada, the "Spice Island of the Caribbean," Caracas, Venezuela; Curacao, Netherlands Antilles; Balboa, Panama; Acapulco Mexico and Cabo San Lucas, Mexico.

The price of the cruise ranges from $1420 to $2540 per person, depending on cabin selection. The price covers air fare from midwest cities; such as Kansas City, Wichita, Omaha, Lincoln, St. Louis and Des Moines; to San Juan and back from Los Angeles after the cruise.

Applications are being taken on a first come, first serve basis and the ship is about full, Miller said.

The alumni association has mailed out about 25,000 cruise brochures to UNL alumni.

Gymnasts compete without Williams

By Jim Kay

The UNL men's gymnastics team will compete without the services of its top all-arounder this weekend in the Big 8 Conference Invitational meet in Lawrence, Kan.

Allen labeled Williams importance to the team as "the key to our success."

"If Mark is in the lineup, we'll be pretty good," Allen said. "If we would have had him at Iowa State, I think we would have stayed even with them. We still did pretty good considering we had five freshmen in the lineup."

The Cyclones downed UNL last Saturday at Ames, Ia., 211 to 200.

Allen said he is impressed with freshmen Barry Cook, Chuck Chelmka and Jim Winkleman. Winkleman's progress on the high bar is especially pleasing, he added.

"I've never seen anyone learn so much on the high bar in three weeks as he has," Allen said.

Besides Williams, the Huskers also will be competing without pommel horse specialist Mike Cosgrove who, according to Allen, quit the team after nationals last spring.

"He demanded a full-ride scholarship and I would not give it to him," Allen said. "Specialists only get books and tuition. You can't put demands on coaches like that."

Allen said still rings specialist Kurt Mackie was an All-American last year and "never complained about being on a part-time scholarship."

"Mackie was scoring 9.4's and Cosgrove was scoring 8.8's," Allen said. "He thought he was the only horse man we had. It's too bad because I feel we brought him a long way in gymnastics. When it was time to reap the benefits, he couldn't help us."

Junior Steve Todd, a specialist in the pommel horse, said he felt he is at the same ability level as Cosgrove was last year.

Another Husker specialist is Terry Nowels. Nowels was the junior college national champion on the pommel horse before transferring to UNL this fall.

Cosgrove, who could not be reached for comment, finished second at the Big 8 Conference championships last March, and competed in the national meet as an individual performer.

The Huskers, who hosted the Big 8 Invitational meet last year, will try to improve on their second place finish. Iowa State University (ISU) is the meet's defending champion.

Last year, ISU finished with a score of 410 to UNL's 400 points. The University of Oklahoma (OU) finished third with 399 points. OU went on to win the Big 8 championship in March edging out ISU and the Huskers.
