Food 'n Such lunch series greeted by student support

By John Ortmann

Comments on a new Nebraska East Union program launched Monday ranged from "good idea" to "great idea."

The East Union Program Council's (EUPC) Food 'n Such noon luncheon series, scheduled to continue for the remainder of this week, features live and video-taped entertainment and a special meal.

Entertainment for the remainder of the event, taking place daily in the East Union Great Plains Room from noon through 1 p.m., includes today's videotape of comedian Robert Klein and Thursday's live presentation of magician Jon VonGillern. The program will end Friday with a videotape of Fleetwood Mac concert excerpts. The tapes will be shown on an eight-foot screen.

The program, financed by student fees, is an outgrowth of last year's East Campus Task Force survey, according to Tony Warner, East Union program and recreation manager. Warner said the survey showed a need for more day-time programs at the East Union and the present program is an attempt to meet that need.

Noon-time concert

The event opened Monday with a noon-time concert by singer and guitarist John Ballew, a UNL law student.

Warner said each entertainer will receive $50 for his appearance.

Also offered is a special $1.50 meal consisting of soup, salad, roll and beverage.

Ginney Wright, human development and the family department professor, said the entertainment provided more of a break during the noon meal. She added that the food offered was an economical, well-balanced meal.

Extra seating

Hazel Hutchinson, a secretary in the same department, said she enjoyed the meal and entertainment, adding that the extra seating relieved crowding in the East Union cafeteria.

Many students agreed the program was worthwhile.

"I think it's great," said Arden Miller of Lodgepole.

Taking place in conjunction with the Food 'n Such program is Video Awareness Week. In addition to the Klein and Fleetwood Mac tapes, a documentary on food and population entitled "Who Shall Feed the World" and a football blooper tape entitled "NFL Follies" will be shown at various times and places in the East Union throughout the week.

The tapes are scheduled to be shown daily from 9:30 to 11 a.m. in the Loft, from 11 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. in the Great Plains Room and from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Hollow.

Debaters fourth

The UNL Debate team captured 4th place at Kansas University's Fall Classic in Lawrence, Kan. last weekend.

Sophomore Keith Freadhoff and senior Marin Kushner won six debates and lost two. Kushner was named second place speaker in the tournament.

The UNL team competed against 32 teams from nine midwestern states. It was the team's fourth tournament this year.
