East Union art is stolen

A Dec. 21 art theft from the Nebraska East Union has caused the relocation of some art objects and the repossession of others by Sheldon Art Gallery, according to the Nebraska East Union Manager.

Daryl Swanson said he noticed a 3-by-6 macrame wall hanging was missing at 5:15 p.m. on the last day of fall semester finals. He later determined the hanging had been seen last at 3:15 the same day.

Jon Nelson, assistant director of University galleries, said the Mary Kester original was valued at between $400 and $450. It was insured, he said.

Kester, described by Nelson as one of the best fiber artists working in Nebraska, is an Omaha resident. The hanging was bought by Sheldon Art Gallery two years ago and has been displayed in the East Union since late summer.

Capt. Robert Edmunds, director of the criminal and security division of UNL Campus Police said police have no suspects in the case. Edmunds said police were not notified until "quite some time" after the theft.

Sheldon loans art objects for use in campus buildings at a rate of $10 a year for each art piece, Swanson said. This cost covers framing and placement, he said.

The theft has caused this loan policy to be reconsidered, Swanson said, adding that termination of the program has been discussed.

Nelson said that initially the gallery considered asking that all loans be returned, but the campus loan policy will be continued.

"Relatively, our loss record hasn't been bad," Swanson said, "but any loss at all of a valuable piece is bad." He said although the piece was insured, money cannot replace an art object. The theft was the first at the East Union.

Anyone with information of the theft should contact UNL Campus Police or Sheldon Art Gallery.

Don't Spend
A Penny More
For Books
Than You Have To.

No one has to inform you how expensive text books are. And if you have to buy a lot of textbooks this semester, the bill can take a good chunk of your money.

That's why we urge you to buy your textbooks from us. Why? Because we offer you the lowest prices possible on all books, both new and used. On new textbooks, the retail price is established by the publisher. Used textbooks are priced at 75% of the current publisher's list price, which means you can save 25% over the cost of a new book.

This semester, we sent out several thousand circulars to students offering them a straight 5 percent discount off all textbook purchases, both new and used. If you still have yours—use it; you can save an additional 5 percent!!!
