International Agricultural Awareness Program
Concerned about agricultural cooperation and development throughout the world? The "International Agricultural Awareness Program" begins this week. In an attempt to promote the sharing of technical, social, and cultural variations represented on East Campus, a series of informal lunch hour discussions will be held on consecutive Mondays in the East Campus Student Union (11:30—1:30). Eating space will be provided. These free programs will address the many roles of international agriculture in meeting today's food problems, as viewed by international students, professors, returned volunteers, and local organizations. Individuals and groups are encouraged to participate in the exchange by organizing brief 15-30 minute presentations, including panel discussions, slides or your imagination.
