AUSTIN CITY LIMITS

Michael Murphey, one of the southwest's most musically gifted performers, is featured on the third season opener of 'Austin City Limits' on PBS Friday, Feb. 17.

Few musicians can paint a truer picture of life in the southwest than Murphey. His music is the embodiment of the mingling musical styles which have merged and matured over the past few years in Austin.

Murphey grew up in Dallas, Tex., and spent his early years living what he describes as "the standard middle-class life." He harbored the ambition to become a minister and when his grandfather gave him his first guitar, he began learning country and gospel songs.

"Until I was 16 or 17," Murphey remembered, "I did what everyone else my age was doing—football, trying to keep my grades up in school and of course going to church. I became radically conservative rather than becoming a rebel as many young people do. Religion became a very big influence in my life."

ADVOCATES The debate centers on the question of Palestinian self-determination as it relates to the formulation of peace in the Middle East. The program will attempt to cut through the diplomatic jargon which surrounds this issue. (60 min.)

QUINCY Quincy suspects that a young husband administered the slow acting drug that induced his wife's heart attack, but a hasty cremation makes it almost impossible to prove. (60 min.)

Sweep Left (815 O)—If you thought this was just a foosball hangout, try the very good prime rib. Also offers seafood and salad bar.

Tico's (317 S. 17)—Good Mexican food and good mixed drinks, but you may have to wait during peak hours because this is a very popular restaurant.

Tony and Luigi's (5140 O)—A popular premium restaurant with an Italian flair. Everything on the menu is good, but bring money because it's not cheap. Good for a "special" meal.

Valentino's Pizza (3457 Holdrege, 2701 S. 70, 27th and Highway 2)—the classic college pizza hangout, and for good reason. Fine-flavored pizza, not as heavy as Godfather's or as light as Pizza Hut. Salads are big and crisp, cheese and garlic rolls tasty. Check the Yellow Pages before going, because not all locations are open all days. Often a long wait.

Village Inn (2949 N. 27, 111 S. 29, 111 S. 66)—A pancake house with a wide menu choice, open until 2 a.m. Village Inn burger is a good value. Unusual items—blintzes, German apple pancake (which may be too big for one person to eat unassisted.) Service is usually rather quick.

Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers (930 N. 48, 2615 S. 48)—The best hamburgers of the chain shops if you like plain hamburgers. Mild but pleasant chili also good. The ordering system is a little inconvenient and prices are on the high side for hamburger places, but many consider the extra cost worth it.

Greenwich Cafe (1917 O)—An unpretentious cafe that's turned into a trendy gathering place for some groups of students. Famous for its fish and chips, but also offers other good items, especially soups.

Kuhl's (1038 O)—A nice, quiet little diner with reasonably priced, competently prepared food, although nothing fancy.

Little King (1311 O, 1045 N. 27, 3801 N. 48)—Your choice in submarine sandwich shops is determined mostly by what you like on your mammoth meal. Little King tops its sandwiches with several vegetables unless requested otherwise. Choice of meats is wide.

McDonald's (865 N. 27, 5305 O, 5330 S. 10)—Every-one complains about McDonald's, and everyone goes there. It's because they have several things that are pretty good by any standard. Big Mac's special sauce makes it a top burger, and competitors don't offer cherry pie.
