

Candidate too poor for filing fee, but not for ski vacation

Omaha—Nebraska's only pauper candidate for governor returned to Waverly Monday after a three-day skiing vacation in Colorado with his family.

Richard Hedrick, 50, a locomotive engineer for Burlington Northern Railroad, became the fifth candidate for the Republican nomination for governor this month, after he took an oath saying he could not pay the $400 filing fee.

A spokesman for Burlington Northern in St. Paul, Minn., said locomotive engineers are paid an average of $30,000 a year.

It was the second time Hedrick filed for office without paying the filing fee and then took a skiing vacation.

In 1976, he filed as a candidate in the 25th Legislative District against State Sen. Jerome Warner. Hedrick scribbled on his 1976 filing application that he was protesting a state requirement that he pay a $48 filing fee, or 1 percent of the annual $4,800 legislative salary.

As a result of Hedrick's 1976 free filing and subsequent ski vacation, the 1978 Legislature passed a bill to make it more difficult for persons to run without paying the filing fee.

State Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City acknowledged he had Hedrick in mind when he introduced a proposal in LB 233 that will tighten filing requirements.

Psychic gives skeleton location

New York—Dorothy Allison told police that 14-year-old Susan Jacobson could be found in a marsh area, in sight of two bridges and an abandoned car, and near the letters "M," "A" and "R."

That was almost two years ago. Susan Jacobson's skeleton was found Saturday in a 55-gallon oil drum at the bottom of a 12-foot shaft in a Staten Island shipyard, in an area that fit the psychic's description.

About 200 feet from the shaft, high on a rock, were the red-painted letters "MAR."

Susan's parents now say police could have saved them months of anguish if they had only listened to Allison, a Nutley, N.J., resident whom they say claims she has helped the FBI and police find 20 bodies.

"They kept saying we need facts, not psychics," said Robert Jacobson, the girl's father.

Medical Center union

Omaha—Union efforts to organize University of Nebraska Medical Center employees are under way, according to an official of Local 1015, Retail and Professional Employees Union.

David Marrero, union organizing director, said the effort is directed toward all but supervisory personnel and faculty members.

About 2,500 employees may be affected, he said.
