

Resignation of three coaches forces 'vacancy' signs

"Vacancy" signs are becoming standard fare around the UNL Athletic Department.

With the resignations of three Husker coaches, Athletic Director Bob Devaney has become a busy man - he has to fill the positions. And since the recruiting season is peaking, finding new coaches is doubly important.

Devaney must find head coaches in women's basketball, men's swimming and wrestling.

Marcia Walker, John Reta and Orval Borgianni left the head posts in basketball, swimming and wrestling respectively.

"We've been receiving applications and they go through a screening committee," Devaney said Tuesday. "We'll try to get down to two or three names then pick from them."

"What you do is actually advertise the positions," he added. "The response has been quite good."

Devaney said the selection process won't be speeded just to fill a position. "You just don't get rid of one and pick another," Devaney said.

"It (not having a head coach) has slowed our recruiting, but we're not going to hurry our selection. The overall picture is more important."

Devaney said Borgianni has continued to recruit high school athletes and he said he hopes Reta is too.

The athletic department has stopped taking basketball applications and will begin interviewing later this week, Devaney said, adding that a coach should be named by April 15.

"We've studied the applications and won't monkey around after that," he added.

Devaney admitted the Husker teams without head coaches now may have to settle for some "leftover athletes."

Moving the date for signing the letters of intent to an earlier date, April 15, has hurt UNL's chances to sign some of the better athletes, Devaney said.

The signing date used to be later, but the earlier date will force UNL coaches to sign athletes that "haven't been picked over," he added.

Devaney could hurriedly select the three head coaches so they could recruit competitively with other schools.

But the overall picture is more important. Some of the best athletes on one team don't make a winner unless their coach knows how to win.

By taking that extra evaluation time, the athletic department may find just that kind of coach. A coach who can turn "picked over athletes" into winners.

AMERICA'S FINE LIGHT BEER

How is Coors
beer
brewed?

Coors is one of the most expensively brewed beers in the world taking about 55 days in the aging and finishing processes alone. Coors is brewed with a special strain of Moravian III barley malted to perfection. Pure Rocky Mountain Spring Water gathered from more than 40 springs at the Golden brewery, and the finest grains to make the beer light and refreshing. Specially grown hops are added to give it aroma and flavor. Yeast is not an ingredient. However, it serves as a catalyst to help change sugars to alcohol and carbon dioxide.
