

Roskens...

After a decision, Roskens said he seldom looks back, although some may remind him of past decisions.

However, he said he does not consider himself solely responsible for university happenings.

He said he believes things are not accomplished through one man, but rather through cooperation, inspiration, innovation and the hard work of all on campus.

Roskens pointed out that the president also must have an "understanding, supportive Board or Regents" to provide forward thrust for the university. The present board provides this leadership in many unrecognized areas, he said.

"I feel personally gratified about the quality of leadership this board is providing," he said.

Whoever the president meets with cannot avoid the sign behind his desk which reads "Looseth Not Thine Cool."

Roskens said the sign reminds him and others that it does not make sense to expend energy arguing when it could be used more constructively. Over the years, he said he has learned the "sheer folly of blowing up."

Roskens also said he tries to avoid wasting time and energy in prolonged meetings and discussions.

Roskens attributes many of his philosophies to his upbringing on a farm near Spencer, Iowa. He said he feels "a very close kinship to the soil."

Roskens is proud of his agricultural heritage, he said, and has tried to expose his children to farm life.

"I would not trade my farm background," he said.

Lauck arraigned; trial date slated

Lauck, is a self-proclaimed Nazi and editor of the National Socialist Report.

Lauck pleaded innocent to the charge.
