A CAREER IN LAW without law school

After just three months of study at The Institute for Paralegal Training, you'll have a career in law or business—without graduate school. You'll be working closely with attorneys and business people performing many of the duties traditionally handled by lawyers. You'll be well paid, and working in the city of your choice in a bank, major corporation or private law firm. You can even choose a specialty—Corporate Law, Criminal Law, Employee Benefit Plans, Estates and Trusts, General Practice, Litigation or Real Estate.

The Institute was the first school of its kind in the country and is approved by the American Bar Association. Since 1970, The Institute has placed over 2,500 graduates in over 85 cities nationwide.

If you're a graduating senior with above average grades and interested in a challenging career, send in the coupon. We'll send you our new course catalog and everything you need to know about an exciting career as a lawyer's assistant.

I'm interested! Send me your new catalog and information about an exciting career as a lawyer's assistant. Classes begin soon, so hurry.

letters to the editor

Initially, I thought that National Blue Jeans Day was a ridiculous political-suicide move initiated by some naive leaders in the gay movement. But now I am painfully aware of the impact that NBJD had.

Worse yet, people like Geraldo Rivera and Anne Federson (Letters, Mon., April 17) have to clarify to the public that they are heterosexual while defending homosexuals. It is this kind of fear that forces people to remain anonymous.

If nothing else, last Friday made me aware of the stupidity and bigotry of many "straight" people on this campus. It is too bad that the people writing the anti-gay ads in the personals thought they were showing their cleverness. They were actually displaying their moronic tendencies.

I like to say that I am proud to be going to school with gay women and men who have acted admirably in the face of hatred and danger, just as I am ashamed of the "fag-fighters" on our campus.

And it is terribly pathetic that the Greeks of Phi Kappa Psi (with their sign of 15 reasons not to be gay) thought they were only showing the public how insecure and uneducated they are.

Judging from the bigotry of many "straights" at UNL, it is obvious that this university is not doing a good enough job of educating its students.

Daily Nebraskan salesman wins national sales award

The Daily Nebraskan advertising staff won three national awards at the College Newspapers Business and Advertising Managers convention in Chicago last weekend.

Becky Beadell, a senior advertising major from Lincoln, was named the national Distinguished Sales Representative at the convention. She expressed surprise at winning the award. "I had myself psyched out," Beadell said. "I thought the winner would be some guy who had sold millions. I had no idea at all I would win."

Beadell has been a member of the Daily Nebraskan advertising department for three semesters.

The Daily Nebraskan's "Fashion '78" supplement published March 29 was awarded the national Best Special Edition award out of 40 nationwide entries.

Gregg Wurdemann, Daily Nebraskan advertising manager, said the award is "a great honor for us because we were competing against much larger schools. We beat them on quality."

Wurdemann is senior advertising major from Omaha.

The Daily Nebraskan also received a first runner-up in the best individual advertisement competition.
