

Nothing sacred in Naming punk band

Thinking of starting a punk rock band? Looking for a suitable name? All you need to remember is that nothing is too bizarre or obscene for your band, as long as you are willing to live up to your name. But be careful, the following names have already been claimed by currently performing punk bands:

- |                          |                             |

Warning: LP is ominous

By Jeff Taebel

If you've ventured into Dirt Cheap lately, you may have noticed an ominous looking album by a group. The Crap Detectors entitled Victims Of The Media.

Upon further inspection, you might have seen that the album jacket contained several cautionary messages, such as "Warning—This record can be harmful and hazardous to close-minded or rationalizing beings, if you fit into a behavioral pattern, we urge you to put this record down and go to the next stack," and "Caution: De-programming may occur."

At this point, you may have begun to suspect that this is an album by local talent, and you would have been right. The Crap Detectors are, in essence, Jim Jacobi of Lincoln who wrote the album's fourteen songs as well as singing lead and playing guitar, bass and synthesized special effects with some help from Herbie Hill on drums.

Jacobi began writing the music for the album in the summer of 1976, before the New Wave explosion really took place, yet the hard-driving songs have a definite New Wave sound.

Side one of the album is subtitled "Rude, Rash and Raw" and opens with the powerful title song, "Victims Of The Media," which has a memorable chorus: "Victims of the media/victims of the lies/victims of a rationalists/that's cleverly disguised."

Other highlights on the side include a spacy instrumental called "Eichmannism" and a punk rock manifesto entitled "Slave Of The New Wave."

Side two, subtitled "Blunt, Brutal and Bewildering," contains a dirge-like, semi-acoustic number called "Desperate Depression" which is followed by a blazing rocker called "Justify," which features an interesting vocal performance that may remind some of Antennae Jimmy Simmons of Captain Beefheart's Magic Band.

The album was recorded at Jacobi's home on a four-track recorder. The sound quality, while occasionally muddy on the vocals, is surprisingly good for such an endeavor.

Victims Of The Media is a limited edition album of sorts. Since The Crap Detectors did not receive a six-figure contract from one of the major record labels, they had to foot the album-pressing bill themselves and, as a result, the album is being sold on a consignment basis and is currently available only at Dirt Cheap.

Jacobi said more copies of the album could be pressed and distributed to other local record stores if it sells well at Dirt Cheap. He said he has no immediate plans for getting a band together to play his music locally because there is not, as yet, a large audience for this sort of music in this area.

However, if Victims Of The Media proves successful, we may be seeing another Crap Detectors effort from Jacobi in the future. In the meantime, if you're interested in some loud and brash rock from a genuine local New Wave artist, you might give Victims Of The Media a try.

LIFELINE

'Lifeline,' the non-fiction series about the professional and private lives of real doctors, will preview on NBC-TV Thursday, Sept. 7, with a program devoted to Dr. Judson Randolph, Surgeon-in-Chief of the Children's Hospital at the National Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

This pioneering series will be presented Wednesdays each week starting with its premiere presentation on Sept. 20. It will focus on a different doctor in a different locale each week. No actors are ever used and events dictate program content.

An infant in immediate need of sophisticated surgery, a 15-year-old boy with severe abdominal pain and a 9-year-old girl thought to have a growth in a lung are the major cases involving Dr. Randolph during the telecast. Included are scenes showing Dr. Randolph caring for two young burn victims as well as infant Fredericko Vargas (pictured with the doctor).

Hand-held cameras follow Dr. Randolph at Children's Hospital as he performs surgery, comforts patients, talks to their parents and consults with doctors on his staff.
