

Engineers get Melick awards

LINCOLN—Maud Melick Appreciation Scholarships ranging from $100 to $500 have been awarded to five College of Engineering and Technology students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The scholarship was established from monies collected when Miss Melick retired after 43 years as secretary to the Dean of Engineering and Architecture.

Dennis Lee Wendell of Omaha, and Douglas A. Sorenson of Lincoln, both electrical engineering students, will receive $500 scholarships for the academic year.

James A. Hansen of Bellevue, an industrial engineering student, and electrical engineering student, James Pendegrift of Omaha, will receive $250 scholarships for the fall semester.

Gary P. Stine, a civil engineering student from Cambridge, will receive a $100 scholarship for the 1978-79 school year.

ASUN...

Marienu said this senate action had been discussed during his campaign for office and had been considered in the past, but the proposal itself was drawn up this week.

David DeCoster, UNL dean of students, when contacted about the ASUN action, said he felt hopeful that a more effective system ultimately would be created.

"I don't think we should be troubled about this," he said.

DeCoster said that while the student decision-making process certainly is important, it is equally important that students feel good about their involvement with various committees.

Marienu said he hopes to have an alternative proposal prepared within two or three weeks but he said the current system had not been damaged.

"We have not destroyed the structure, we have put it on hold," Marienu said.

Some committees may be retained, Marienu said, but as the new structure is yet to be determined, "we're starting at base zero."

Marienu said the new suggestions about the new structure from faculty and administrators as well as students would be welcomed.

However, Marienu said, student voice in specific areas may have to be sacrificed, because ASUN concentrates on issues of general interest.

Marienu did not specify any ideas for the new structure.

"I wouldn't want to bias any opinions. It's possible anything would happen," he said.

ASUN representatives said Marienu would meet with the recalled committee members this morning at 8.

"We've got a lot of selling to do," Marienu said.

"If we receive crap in one area, we'll follow it up strongly."

The new system would allow more definite action by ASUN when problems are found because student recommendations would have the weight of the senate behind them, he said.

"There is input now, but there is no impact."

Marienu said he feels ASUN's action will increase interest in student government which he felt would continue.
