

Iranians, Americans jointly protest Westmoreland visit

Iranian and American students jointly participated in a protest demonstration against the Shah of Iran and Gen. William Westmoreland's appearance on campus Friday.

About 100 people circled the Broynhill Memorial Fountain in front of the Nebraska Union with banners and protest signs.

An Iranian Student Association spokesman said that the protest by the Iranian students was intended to coincide with Westmoreland's visit.

"Our motto is 'Iran is the next Vietnam,'" he said.

One American student, who chose to remain unidentified, was protesting Westmoreland's visit but agreed with the Iranian students' protest.

Most of the Iranian students were masked to protect themselves and their families in Iran, the Iranian spokesman said.

"We are going to get Americans aware of what is happening in Iran," another Iranian student spokesman said.

"The shah is killing thousands of people in Iran and we want this to come to a stop," he added.

One Iranian observer who chose not to participate in the protest remarked that Americans do not know enough of what is going on outside the United States.

"It is a worthless attempt," he said.

An American observer of the protest said it was "ridiculous because Westmoreland has nothing to do with the situation in Iran.

"I don't think there should be any criticism as to whether Westmoreland should come on campus. Everyone has the right to express their views," he said.

Several leaflets also were handed out to students at the demonstration by the Iranian students and the Committee for Facts about Vietnam.

Bruce Erlich, a spokesman for the committee, said the leaflet, "The Crimes of William C. Westmoreland," was prepared by faculty and student members who feel that the Vietnam war was too easily forgotten.

The leaflet states that the situations in Iran and South Africa may be new Vietnams in the making and that Gen. Westmoreland knew about the war crimes committed in Vietnam.

The leaflet also urged that "even as William Buckley was balanced by Jane Fonda last year, so a speaker closer to the political, military, and human truth of the war than Westmoreland should be brought later this year: we suggest Noam Chomsky, Daniel Ellsberg, or Richard Falk."

GRADUATING COLLEGE STUDENTS ... WHAT'S AN NSA CAREER? Take the PQT and find out.

Graduates from a broad spectrum of academic disciplines may now enter challenging career training programs with the National Security Agency. If you are receiving a liberal arts, business, or mathematics degree before September 1979, the Professional Qualification Test (PQT) could be your first step toward employment in one of these programs.

You must register by November 4, 1978 in order to take the PQT on campus. It will not be given again during this school year. By scoring well on this test, you will qualify for an employment interview. During the interview, an NSA representative will discuss the specific role you might play in furthering this country's communications security or in producing vital foreign intelligence information.

The PQT helps to measure your potential for career areas such as:

PROGRAMMING - Our vast communications analysis projects could not be effectively managed without the latest computer hardware/software and people who know how to use them.

LANGUAGES - Foreign languages are valuable tools for research, analysis, and documentation projects.

Advanced training in language (perhaps a new language) can be expected.

COMMUNICATIONS - Scientifically devised, tested, and managed cryptographic systems insure the maximum degree of security in transmitting sensitive information around the globe. Since cryptography is a unique pursuit, the training of new employees here is extensive and esoteric.

OTHER OPPORTUNITIES - A limited number of applicants will also be selected from the PQT to enter our Information Science, Logistics, Resource Management, Security, and Personnel fields.

PICK UP A PQT BULLETIN at your college placement office. It contains a registration form which you must mail prior to November 4 in order to take the test on November 18. There is no registration fee.

Electronic Engineering, Computer Science, Slavic, Mid-Eastern and Asian language majors and Mathematics majors at the Masters level may interview without taking the PQT.

U.S. Citizenship is mandatory. A thorough background investigation and medical examination are also required.
