Visitation proposal backed

By Shelley Smith

ASUN passed a resolution Wednesday night to endorse the open visitation proposal of the Residence Hall Association.

The proposal, if approved by the Board of Regents Friday, will allow Selleck Quadrangle residents on the 7200 and 7300 floors to vote on whether to have open visitation.

According to RHA, this would give each floor the option of closing the floor to members of the opposite sex at anytime the floor chooses to do so.

Senator Joe Nigro said he feels the proposal is moderate.

"It isn't a radical proposal by any means, and the housing association approves of it," he said.

ASUN also authorized a $100 expenditure for pamphlets to be passed out on Students Day, Nov. 28th.

President Ken Marienau said about 12,000 pamphlets will be printed to express some of the problems UNL students are having.

Tuition high

Included, he said will be that students control only 5 percent of their student fees and that tuition at UNL is the second highest in the Big Eight.

He said the main emphasis of the pamphlets, however, will show that the students want to be respected as students and not just as a school with a football team.

He said the money for the pamphlets will come from senate expenditures.

Senator Bob Gleason, chairman of the Government Liason Committee, commented on the publicity given to the voter registration mix-up.

The mix-up caused 150 to 200 students to be ineligible to vote in the Nov. 7 election because of an illegal registration drive by GLC.

Publicity unfavorable

Gleason said the publicity, although unfavorable, was "pretty fair" and he saw very few distortions.

He said that ASUN did their best to assume all of the responsibility even though it was actually the fault of the GLC.

"There has been a lot of heat in the office. You're (as senators) going to feel a lot of heat for being involved with ASUN, and we're sorry," he said.

He added that he felt ASUN and GLC had turned the incident into something they could "learn a great deal from."

Fraternity AUF competition features legs, knobby knees

The Miss Legs/Mr. Knobby Knees contest sponsored by Beta Sigma Psi fraternity is in progress this week, and will continue until the kickoff of the Oklahoma game on Saturday.

The money received in this year's contest will go to AUF.

Ninety percent of the Greek houses have a representative participating, with only four houses not entered.

A picture of each representative's legs has been posted in the north bay of the main lounge of the Nebraska Union.

Everyone is eligible to vote for their favorite pair of legs by putting money in the canisters under the pictures. The picture with the most money raised wins.

The winner's house receives a travelling trophy.

"In the past we've done it for the American Cancer Society and the Olympics," said Cliff Sieck of Beta Sigma Psi.

The first year of the contest they made about $100, the second year, $200, and about $500 a year has been collected since then, according to Sieck.
