Feminist says women shall overcome

By Sue Brown

Women's needs and yearnings have been suppressed so long that in the future, women will emerge as the world leaders, according to a nationally noted socialist feminist.

Clara Fraser, a political organizer and former newspaper editor and columnist spoke to a gathering in the Nebraska Union during a program sponsored by the Women's Resource Center.

Fraser said that presently, women compose the majority of every single oppressed group and are "three times as militant and three times as uppity as anyone else."

The socialist feminist has to answer the question "Reform or Revolution?" she said. Once an individual decides to use their special talents and skills for people instead of against them, there is nowhere to go, but towards revolution, she added.

According to Fraser, anyone concerned with rights and issues as gut-level concerns must examine the question of capitalism and socialism.

"Does anyone really think that American capitalism is going to free the world and everyone in it?" she asked. "We are revolutionists. We hate American superiority," said Fraser who describes herself as a "red diaper baby." She was taught about revolution at her father's knees and has done the same with her children.

If a movement is not made up of the oppressed, a movement will never get off the ground, she said. The movement must be composed of minority women, lesbians and working women, she added.

The social feminist does not want to be isolated or put into categories, she said.

The feminist movement was getting "pretty disgusting" before the "new wave" of socialist feminism hit, she said, but she believes that the movement is moving at a tremendous pace now.

The biggest problem that slows up any movement is the lack of self-confidence and self-belief, she said.

Revolutionary social feminism is a very logical, historical, natural, theoretical and personal movement which combines and synthesizes what is best for human beings, she said.

"We have to fight like hell to keep from going backwards at an accelerated pace," she said, adding that evolution becomes revolution.

Socialist newspapers, pamphlets and other literature were available at the conclusion of the program.
