I was very concerned as a student at UNL to read about the Friday demonstration. Unfortunately, what caught my attention was a letter from a student named K. Bloom. He talked about being "disturbed" by the Arab students display. I don't think it was disturbing unless someone doesn't like the Arabs to express themselves.

He was talking about a cause and he calls the Palestinian condition despicable. I wonder what kind of student he is who calls all Palestinians and their cause despicable. I don't think the Arabs or Palestinians Arabs want to push Israel into the ocean. The want, as the posters have shown, is a democratic Palestinian State for Jews, Moslems, and Christians.

It is not a struggle of two people to survive. It is a struggle of the Palestinians to return to their homeland. I hope that all people will live in peace and harmony after they give the Palestinians their rights.

Everyone invited to Schramm

On Thursday, Dec. 3, Daniel Ellsberg will be speaking at 10 a.m. in the Schramm Hall main lounge in addition to his Union appearance.

It was not RHA's intention that this program be limited to residence hall students or to residents of Harper-Schramm-

Smith complex. RHA is sponsoring Ellsberg and other speakers to provide more programming opportunities and to foster the free exchange of ideas.

RHA President

Donations needed

Students have the opportunity to directly control an important part of the extra-curricular activities: Speakers, bringing to this campus the provocative issues of our time, have been funded in the past by mandatory student fees and are now funded by direct student donation.

Thursday's program, Vietnam in perspective: Part II, was funded in this manner as the Talks and Topics Committee solicited students and groups for financial support.

The Innocents society was among the ten organizations which donated money to the Talks and Topics Committee in the hope that they can survive despite their surmounting financial inadequacies.

If the university community is to continue to enjoy a speaker program comparable or better in quality to that of other universities, individual students and organizations must recognize the need to contribute what they can to the present Talks and Topics Committee's efforts.
