Ham given by ag club

With the presentation of a ham to Gov. J. James Exon, the Block and Bridle Club's ham sale has begun. The Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources student organization hopes to sell 20,000 pounds of the boneless, smoked ham by Dec. 24.

Profits will be used to finance the club's programs, according to ham sales co-chairmen, Mark Iodence, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Iodence of Hemingford, and Gerri Monahan, 21, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Monahan of Hyannis.

Wagner . . .

Wagner said student fees are too high, and should be eliminated except where they are absolutely necessary; such as for residence halls, health center and bond redemption funds.

ASUN and the Daily Nebraskan are examples of institutions that shouldn't receive student fees, he said.

Wagner said he is in favor of beer on campus now, and eventually all alcohol.

"Before you walk you creep," Wagner said. "We'll start with beer. It's in practically every dorm room anyway. . . We might as well recognize it and allow it."

Wagner said he can sympathize with student disturbances before the Oklahoma-Nebraska game, while he can't condone it.

In Sept., 1978, a University Police officer and a student security supervisor filed reports claiming that Wagner yelled at them and accused them of not doing their jobs.

Wagner denied that the incident took place, and claimed it was a "case of mistaken identity."

Officer Barbara McGill identified Wagner from Daily Nebraskan photos of various middle-aged men. A police check of the car's license number showed that the car was registered to Wagner.

Wagner's private business procedures have been almost as controversial as his stands and actions in his public life, including those on the Board of Regents.

For more than a year, Wagner has been indirectly involved in lawsuits filed by Pokorny against the city of Schuyler, because of land that the city purchased from Wagner for a sewage lagoon.

The Schuyler City Council purchased 252 acres at $2,000 an acre. Pokorny claimed that this was too much to pay for the land, which is in a flood plain. The city council tried to push it through without the public's knowledge, he said.

Last year Pokorny sued the city for violating the state open meetings law during the land purchase, and won. But the council brought up the land deal again while Pokorny was out of town, and approved the purchase.

Pokorny filed suit again, this time claiming that it would be a health hazard to use the land for sewage lagoons because of the danger of flooding.

Pokorny lost the second lawsuit, and has asked for a new ruling.

The split between Pokorny and Wagner dates back further than the city's land purchase last year.

In 1974, Wagner supported a new airport in Schuyler, Pokorny said. Wagner was backing the airport philosophically, but not financially, Pokorny said.

Pokorny said he was against the airport from the start because there's an all-weather airport 12 miles away from Schuyler.

The proposed airport would just have consisted of grass strips for runways, he said.

Pokorny said Wagner's influence in Schuyler swayed the city council in favor of a new airport.

Wagner associates were on the city council and the Board of Public Works, Pokorny said.

Wagner, however, denies any involvement in the airport proposal.

Pokorny denied that he has a vendetta against Wagner.

"That's not the case," Pokorny said. "We've had philosophical differences on these two items, but I really can't think of anything else that we've had differences on."

Pokorny said Schuyler residents are afraid to oppose Wagner, because of his involvement in area businesses.

"The only problem is, not too many people are in a position to speak out as I have, because of Mr. Wagner's influence in Schuyler. And it probably wasn't too smart for me to," said Pokorny, who is the son of another prominent Schuyler businessman.

On July 17, 1960, Wagner received a presidential pardon for a 1954 conviction in connection with altering grain scale tickets.

Wagner has occasionally drawn protest louder than Pokorny's, for some of his actions on the Board of Regents.

Wagner said he is still in favor of building a new stadium for UNL. Adding to the present stadium is not only costly but foolish, he said.
