Physical plant ready to turn off the heat

UNL physical plant workers have been ready to turn on the air conditioning since March 1, but when they will actually begin is "a function of the weather" according to Jim Heines, UNL energy conservation manager.

Heines said no specific date has been set to begin cooling classrooms.

Heines said thermostats are set at 78 degrees in warm weather.

"Our budget has been strained by the cold weather this season," he said. "During this air-conditioning season, we're going to try to use fresh air when we can."

University student dies from apparent overdose

A UNL student died at Lincoln General Hospital Thursday from an apparent overdose of medication.

Nancy A. Penner, 22, who resided in Nelhardt, walked into the University Health Center about 2:30 a.m. Wednesday, suffering from effects of the overdose, according to University Police.

She was taken to Lincoln General in critical condition, and died about 1 a.m. Thursday.

Police released no further information, except to say no foul play was suspected. Penner, a senior, was originally from Beatrice.
