

Lending library makes prints available

Students interested in putting artwork instead of posters on their dorm room walls should investigate the Art Lending Library.

Sponsored by the University Program Council, the library offers prints of famous artwork to students and faculty. The collection includes prints of works by Rembrandt, Van Gogh, Braque, Degas, Matisse, Picasso, Grant Wood, Norman Rockwell and many other well-known artists. The works are in good condition although some are older than others, according to Bonnie Lutz, chairwoman of UPC-City's visual arts committee.

A WORK CAN BE RENTED for the semester by presenting a university identification card. Only one print can be checked out on a card, but students can present friend's cards to rent additional prints.

"There may also be a small charge, ranging from 50 cents to $1.50, just to cover our expenses," she said. At the end of the semester, renters return their prints to a booth in one of the university unions.

"It's just like checking out a library book. There's a time printed on the back of the print telling when it is due. The date is usually about a week before finals," Lutz said. "We usually have pretty good luck in getting the prints back undamaged."

ABOUT 200 WORKS WILL be displayed in the Nebraska Union main lounge and 100 more will hang on the walls of the Loft in the Nebraska East Union. Following a display period from Aug. 26 through Sept. 10, students can check out prints Sept. 8 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Sept. 10 from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.
