also be making their first starts, while senior left guard John Havekost will be starting his second game. Last year's starting center Kelly Saalfeld is the only returning starter on the offensive line from last year's team.

"There's been a lot of worrying this spring about the offensive line, but as far as I'm concerned we should do a good job," Steiner said. "We're all big, physical guys and we have some pretty good backups too."

"There's a lot of tradition here at Nebraska especially on the offensive line. Everybody has to wait their turn," he said.

Rulon Jones may not even be Steiner's toughest competition this season, he said. "Oklahoma and Missouri always have good tackles and Penn State has a couple of All-American tackles," he said. "It's going to be tough all year."

Steiner also said the starting offensive line is pretty well set.

Steiner who moved to right tackle said he started the fall as the top left tackle but Mark Goodspeed is now on top there.

So again the numbers to be watching in the interior line are Nebraska's No. 48, Dan Steiner and Utah State's No. 80 (Rulon Jones).

Unification Church...

Raineri, 22, is from Chicago and was brought up as a Catholic. His first contact with the Moon religion was through a researcher at Southern Illinois University, which he was attending at the time. About one year later he was a full-time member.

According to Pearlman the purpose of the Unification Church is to "unite all mankind under one God." On Easter Sunday in 1936, Rev. Moon, living in Korea, had a vision from God, he said. He was told that he had a mission to fill, that is, to prepare the world for Christ's return and the unity of the world.

That is the Divine Principle, Pearlman said. Members see the Bible as history from God's point of view and the Divine Principle as "a message for 20th century man."

The Unification Church uses both the Bible and the Divine Principle. According to Rev. Moon, there are three problems in the United States today. These problems are a decline in religious values, an increase in immorality through pornography, drugs and liberal sex practices, and communist influences.

Moon is a strong anti-communist and views America as one of the final blocs, keeping the world from falling to Communism.

When asked about the strong negative feelings in the United States toward the church Pearlman said that the Unification

Church is misunderstood and misrepresented.

Because Rev. Moon is from the East, he sees Christianity from a different perspective than the Western world does, and therefore has created controversy.

Pearlman said he wishes people would listen to their side of the story. He added that he and Raineri were displeased with a Aug. 30, 1979 Lincoln Voice article. He said the article contained several things that weren't true and the article was "very biased."

One subject causing negative public feelings is the fund-raising aspect of the Unification Church. Many of the full-time members reportedly live in poor conditions.

The Nebraska headquarters, although in an older building, is comfortably furnished. Rev. Moon, however, lives in the Unification Church center in New York.

Pearlman dismissed the difference, saying it is "a matter of protocol."

When the members are raising funds, they come in contact with many more people than when they "witness" personally to them, he said. Therefore, they are remembered by more people for their money-making efforts than by their real purpose, Pearlman said.

Research funds available to students

Almost $3,000 is available for anyone interested in doing research at UNL, according to Janice Kluck, chairwoman of the ASUN Academic Policy Committee.

ASUN received the grant from the All-University Fund. During last year's ASUN election, student voted to appropriate the money, Kluck said, adding that students closely involved with the university fund were responsible for the amount allocated.

Applications for the research grants are being taken now, as are applications for a committee which will allocate the money, she said. The committee will include three students, three faculty members, Allison Tempero, chairwoman of the ASUN Educational Quality Commission and Kluck.

The members of the grant committee will be selected by members of the Academy Policy Committee. The committee is now determining guidelines for the grant committee to follow and is developing criteria for computer time and duplicating costs that researchers may need, Kluck said.

The grant is "a new step for student government," Kluck said. ASUN can now provide "a benefit for students in a different way," she added.

Applications from students interested in serving on the grant committee are due Sept. 17. Deadline for submitting grant proposals is Oct. 15. Allocations for research projects will begin Nov. 16.
