He said that no matter what definition is used to define insanity, a psychiatrist or psychologist must "rely on their own personal ethical judgment."

Elwork suggested three methods to improve insanity defense procedures:

- announce the insanity defense earlier. In some cases, the defense attorneys may announce insanity defense as late as 10 days before the trial. Elwork said this is not enough time for adequate psychological study.

- Allow more than one examination of the defendant. He said an insane person may have good and bad days like everyone else.

- Require psychologists or psychiatrists acting as expert witnesses in trials to take a minimum competency test.

Klaus Hartman, superintendent of the Nebraska Regional Center, said if a person pleads guilty by reason of insanity, he or she should plead insane and guilty. Using this method, he said a person found insane and guilty would be treated first for insanity and would then be released to serve a sentence for the crime.

Elwork disagreed with the insanity and guilty method because in some cases an insane person does not know the difference between right and wrong. He said this method takes away the right of the defendant to say if the crime was intentional or not.

Massengale leaves on Indonesia trip

Martin Massengale, vice chancellor for the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources on East Campus, left for Indonesia Sept. 16 to assist the country in a review of its crop development and research programs.

Jack Robbins, dean of agriculture at Washington State University, is also on the trip. Massengale, Robbins and Ralph Cummings, an agriculturalist, will look at agricultural programs in Indonesia and make recommendations for the future.

Rice is the country's top agricultural product, but the team will focus on secondary crops, Massengale said, because rice production is fairly efficient.

Secondary crops include coconuts, sweet potatoes, grain crops and horticulture crops such as coffee and spices.

The team will return to the United States Sept. 30.

Two premium reasons for using Maxell in every car deck.

At one time, using high-quality cassettes in your car stereo didn't make much sense. But all that's changed.

Today, many car cassette decks can equal a good home unit. So, Maxell gives you a choice of premium cassettes to record at home and play back in your car.

UD-XL I, normal bias cassettes, give you the high output and low distortion you expect from Maxell. UD-XL II, hi-level bias cassettes, accentuate the high end for more dynamic playback, while maintaining low distortion.

So by all means, use Maxell in your premium quality car stereo. Then you can hear our reasons why.
