

'Wearin' of the blues to signify student protest

By Barb Richardson

Another students day is in the planning, according to ASUN Sen. John Kelly. Kelly told the senate last night during their meeting that senators have been working on the plans since the resolution proclaiming a students day was passed Aug. 29.

The day is planned for Oct. 27 during the Colorado game and according to Kelly, students will be urged to wear blue to protest problems at UNL.

Kelly said that letters will be sent to the NU Board of Regents to get feedback from them on the students day.

"Hopefully, they (the regents) will not blow it off like they did the tuition increase," Kelly said.

Sen. Janice Kluck questioned if the regents would take the time to write back.

"We're going to, I hate to say—'put them on the spot,' but that's it," Kelly said.

Plans for students day includes trying to get speakers during protest week to talk about academic issues, window dressings in residence hall windows and getting support from Greek houses.

Student input on UNL's budget is one of the objectives of ASUN's Budget and Fees Committee, according to chairwoman Renee Wessels.

Budget and Fees will be trying to get five representatives from each of UNL's colleges' student advisory boards to meet with the deans and heads of faculty in each of their colleges and discuss the budget, Wessels said.

This year, the student representatives will have to discuss the budget that's already been prepared, but next year the students will hopefully be involved in preparing each of the colleges budgets, Wessels said.

"It's always been an idealistic thing (getting student input on the budget) that they've (ASUN) has always wanted to do," Wessels said.

After the representatives from each of the colleges have worked on their colleges' budgets, Wessels said all of the representatives will combine their resources and make a presentation to the Legislature.

Wessels said that the state senators who she has talked with are "real responsive" to the idea. She said that it will probably help the Legislators because now they will get two views, the students and the administrators.

Wessels said that the committee will present their idea to deans of the colleges this week.

She said the ultimate goal for the future is to get students a vote in the budgeting process.

In other action, ASUN condemned the regents for not reversing their action on increasing tuition.

"ASUN condemns the unresponsiveness of the Regents to student concerns and their lack of responsibility to their constituents," the proposal read.

During the meeting, Maynard Krantz was named to the Union Board, Karen Langland was appointed to the Student Court and faculty members Kam-Ching Leung, Louis Picard and Max Clegg were named to the Student Research Grant Committee.
