

Library hours may be shortened soon

Because of a UNL budget cut, libraries may close on Saturdays and cut their hours beginning next semester. Jerry Rudolph, dean of libraries, said the libraries are extremely under financed.

"It became apparent last April that we would have to reduce library hours," he said. "I raised the issue in front of the Board of Regents this year."

"At one point, we thought that we might have to reduce hours for the whole year. But we are watching what funds we have closely so that if we have to cut down at all which I hope we do not, it will be next semester," he added.

Rudolph emphasized the libraries' primary clientele is the students and said if library hours are cut, he will try to inconvenience students as little as possible.

"A lot of people study on Sunday, so we would keep the libraries open then. And we would either close the libraries only one hour earlier than usual or keep our regular weekday hours," he said.

If the libraries can get temporary funds for the rest of the year, hours will not be cut, Rudolph said. But Rudolph expressed doubts that such funds can be obtained.

A final decision on possible hour cutbacks will be made and publicized next week, Rudolph said.

A career in law—without law school.

After just three months of study at The Institute for Paralegal Training in exciting Philadelphia, you can have a stimulating and rewarding career in law or business — without law school.

As a lawyer's assistant you will be performing many of the duties traditionally handled only by attorneys. And at The Institute for Paralegal Training, you can pick one of seven different areas of law to study. Upon completion of your training, The Institute's unique Placement Service will find you a responsible and challenging job in a law firm, bank or corporation in the city of your choice.

The Institute for Paralegal Training is the nation's first and most respected school for paralegal training. Since 1970, we've placed over 2,500 graduates in over 85 cities nationwide.
