

L.C. Cole...

Cole said before each game he tells the team winning will be "one step up the ladder."

"I say don't let us break one step on that ladder because we'd fall straight to the bottom," he said.

He said he thinks the team is improving each week and it must keep improving if any kind of goals will be accomplished.

"Right now in personal goals it bothers me every game when I don't get a fumble recovery or an interception or block a punt. But in the end, it won't bother me a bit not to have done any of those things if we win the Big Eight and National championships," he said.

Cole, a Physical Education major, got married last summer and he said marriage has also helped him in football.

"It keeps you mind on one thing—you're not running around chasing other girls. It cuts off a lot of outside interference. You can concentrate on your schoolwork and football and somebody's there with you all the time," he said.

Cole said his wife Sharon has been very supportive of him especially when things were looking down. However, he also said she's honest with him about his playing.

"She told me I wasn't playing so good at the first of the season and told me to play with more enthusiasm and intensity," he said.

But, Cole blames enthusiasm—and his wife—for a 15-yard penalty he received last Saturday against Colorado.

"Coach Osborne pulled me out of the game because I was too enthusiastic. I've been getting on Sharon all week telling her she got me thrown out of the game," he said.

Nebraska faces Missouri Saturday and Cole said he plans to give the Tigers his "best shot."

Missouri beat the Huskers in Lincoln last year 35-31 and spoiled Nebraska's hopes of a national championship.

"Missouri has a good team, we wanted to win the game last year, but we wanted them to let us win," he said.

Hornby said the key to the team's defensive success was the play of the four fullbacks.

"It is not just the goalkeeper," he said.

Although all of the Big Eight schools have soccer teams, Streyve said Colorado is the only one to recognize soccer as a varsity sport.

Because the Nebraska soccer program is not recognized as a varsity sport, the team receives no university funds and therefore must finance itself.

Streyve said the team members pay fifteen dollars in dues each year and also referee for a youth soccer league to raise money.

Streyve said the team was looking for a sponsor and mentioned Pabst Blue Ribbon as one possibility.

Despite receiving no university funds, Hornby said he feels the team does a good job of maintaining a positive frame of mind.

"We do pretty well morale-wise," he said. "Our attitude is real good."

Streyve said the conference tournament will at the University of Missouri in the spring. Defending champion Colorado, along with Missouri, will be the strongest entrants, according to Streyve.

The field in Columbia is natural grass and Streyve said this would help the Huskers because they do virtually all of their practicing on natural grass.

According to Hornby, the grass may slow Colorado down somewhat because they practice on astroturf and "they are not a grass team,"
