

Ruffled feathers

Nebraska's pheasant season will start off with a bang on Saturday when hunters will take to the fields and birds will take to the air.

According to local authorities, pheasant population is up in comparison to last year. Rural mailmen, who take pheasant counts each year for the Game and Parks Commission, report double and triple hatchings of pheasants.

Hunting licenses and Habitat stamps can be purchased at many sporting and merchandise stores.

Last years season ended with many satisfied hunters ... and many unsatisfied birds.

Photos by Jerry McBride

