

Women's basketball team downs Creighton, 81-47

By Tad Stryker

The UNL women's basketball team, sparked by freshman forward Kathy Hagerstrom's 23 points, easily defeated Creighton, 81-47, in the first round of the AIAW Sub-Regional Tournament played Thursday at the Bob Devaney Sports Center.

The Huskers broke open a slow, uneventful game when they began to move out of their zone defense and double-team the ball, forcing Creighton into numerous errors. This, plus Hagerstrom's steady completion of 20-foot jump shots, helped Nebraska to a comfortable 41-25 half-time lead.

The Lady Jays, who started four freshmen, took advantage of a Husker letdown at the start of the second half. With 13:50 to go, Creighton had moved to within 11 points, trailing only 46-35. But when their center, Cathy Tryon, hurt her ankle as she went for a loose ball, Creighton deflated.

Hagerstrom immediately converted a three-point play to give the Huskers a 49-35 lead, and from then on, things rapidly went sour for the Lady Jays. Only freshman guard Jean Tierney, who led Creighton with 12 points, could penetrate the Husker defense at all, and she couldn't keep up the pace against the Huskers' balanced attack.

Besides Hagerstrom's 23 points, the Huskers got 14 from their all-time leading scorer, Diana DelVigna; 10 from Carol Garey and Lynne Miller. Laura Tietjen also contributed seven points. The Husker bench enjoyed a productive night, accumulating 30 points.

In other first-round action, top-seeded Drake handled Iowa State 85-73, Northwest Missouri State edged Iowa 73-71 in overtime, and second-seeded Minnesota beat South Dakota, 78-68.

Drake will take on Northwest Missouri State Friday at 6 p.m. and at 8, Nebraska and Minnesota will meet in semifinal action.

The final and consolation games will be played Saturday night. The top three teams in the tournament will be assured of a spot in the regional tournament next weekend at Drake University.

LSU crowd...

Allen is quick to add that traveling to LSU is not all rosy. The team lost the last time it visited LSU. Allen said LSU, the country's seventh ranked team, has been competing well this year and have a fine all-around entry in Jorge Cazares. Cazares finished fourth in the Mardi Gras Invitational in the all-around.

"We're coming into a situation a lot like last week," Allen said. "They (Southern Connecticut) had everything going for them. They had the crowd behind them and nothing to lose."

Although Allen said the success of this season hinges on the NCAA meet scheduled April 3-5 at the Bob Devaney Sports Center, he said the loss at Southern Connecticut hurt.

"We would have liked to have gone two straight seasons with an undefeated dual record, and hopefully finish as undefeated national champions again," Allen said. The Huskers were 6-0 a year ago and 5-0 this season until the loss.

Despite the loss, Allen said his team got good things from the meet.

"The good thing about the Southern Connecticut meet was that we didn't bomb out," Allen said. "Our scores were good and that should help us get the top berth in the NCAA meet."

While Southern Connecticut's 279.70 score is the nation's highest this season, the Huskers' 278.30 was the team's second highest. The Huskers had to compete without the services of Steve Elliott, who doubles as a diver on the Husker swimming team. Allen also had to pull number three all-arounder Mark Williams out of the floor exercise and vaulting events to prevent further aggravation of a back injury.

Williams is expected to be at full strength Sunday, Allen said.

Allen said he has noticed a change in the team since the loss, especially since the LSU meet will be the Huskers last one before the Big Eight and NCAA meets.

"If there's an advantage to the loss, they know they aren't invincible," Allen said. "There were some on the team that must have thought all they had to do was show up to win."

"Everybody's working a lot harder and improving at a pretty good pace," Allen added. "They're aware of the situation and what they have to do. They know Iowa State is going to be fired up to beat them at Big Eight and in the NCAAs."
