Are we to postpone major issues that affect every student at this University in deference to minor issues that involve a small minority of students, most of them members of student government?! ASUN government drags its feet, doesn't keep up on vital issues, entangles itself in its own petty politics, reacts rather than acts, and serves itself before the student body.

We owe our thanks to the Regents and to the group of dedicated students who organized themselves and successfully pushed for a policy change that will be beneficial for all of UNL — and they did it WITHOUT ASUN!

In closing, I must say that I enjoyed Mr. Gaba's insight in suggesting (April 25) that we abolish student elections and appoint Wessels Empress of UNL, though she might want to be King instead, and there are a few others that I would suggest as court jesters. We might also consider importing a few kangaroos to serve in lieu of student court, and establishing a separate fund for red carpet.

Foundation revises goal upwards

The NU Foundation has revised the goal of its major gifts campaign upward to $35 million, co-chairmen Martha and Clifford M. Hardin of St. Louis, Mo., announced.

The minimum goal of $25 million, established at the start of the three-year campaign in October, 1977, has been reached with still five months remaining, the Hardins said.

The decision to adjust the goal was made by the Foundation's Solicitation Committee, according to J. Faulkner, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

He cited several reasons for the revision including unmet needs, particularly in the areas of improved teaching, research and learning resources; higher-than-anticipated rate of inflation which has diluted the purchasing power of the original goal; and the desire to give all alumni an opportu-ity to participate in the campaign.

Faulkner reported that $610,000 had been received toward the goal of $5 million for support of faculty research fellowships, endowed professorships, and visiting professorships.

Improved library resources, such as library acquisitions on all three campuses and the intercampus TV closed circuit, are still some $2 million short of their goal.
